Administrative history

Bath is unique in Britain for its thermal spa waters and its Georgian townscape surrounded by green hills. Settlements have been built around the natural hot springs for thousands of years. In Roman times, 'Aquae Sulis' was a major spa town and religious centre. In the centuries after the end of the Roman occupation the city declined, but in the late seventh century Bath became an important Christian religious centre following the building of a monastery. By the middle ages, Bath had become a regional market town and a centre for the wool trade, with thriving guilds and tradesmen living alongside the powerful and wealthy abbey. Following the dissolution of the monasteries in the sixteenth century, the property owned by Bath Abbey was acquired by the corporation, increasing its power and property-ownership. During the late sixteenth and the seventeenth centuries, as the wool trade declined, Bath began to develop as a spa, with royal and aristocratic visitors attracted by the health-giving reputation of the waters. By the early eighteenth century, the city had been transformed into a nationally-important resort for fashionable nobility and gentry. As fashion and tastes changed, a gradual decline followed, and by the nineteenth century Bath had become a genteel retirement and health resort, albeit with a significant manufacturing sector - until re-inventing itself in the late twentieth century as a vibrant tourist hot-spot.

The Development of the City Council

The origins of the City Council lie in the trade and merchant guilds who obtained a charter from Richard I in 1189, freeing them from tolls levied by the Crown and empowering them to hold fairs and markets. Later charters confirmed and extended these powers, and gave the right to administer justice within the city; the charter granted by Elizabeth I in 1590 also set out in detail how the city was to be administered, confirming what was by that date current practice. The corporation was a self-selecting body of councillors, aldermen and a mayor: twenty councillors were chosen from the freemen of the city; in addition, the councillors chose between 4 and 20 (but usually about 9) aldermen as well as a mayor, who served for a year at a time, but could serve more than once.

Bath was of course only one of several hundred boroughs created by royal charters. In the early nineteenth century, growing dissatisfaction with these chartered boroughs, many of which were seen as being corrupt and inefficient, led to a Royal Commission on Municipal Government and the passing of the Municipal Corporations Act in 1835. The Act brought a number of changes to the governance of boroughs, including Bath. The most important of these were the end to self-selecting corporations, to be replaced by councils elected by ratepayers, and the removal of judicial administration from their responsibilities.

Further changes were introduced by the Local Government Act of 1888. This Act made substantial alterations to local government in England and Wales, creating county councils and county borough councils. The latter were usually large cities, and were outside the county structure, responsible for all services and functions within their boundaries. Bath ceased to be a municipal borough and became one of these new county boroughs, but the change, sometimes of major significance elsewhere, seems to have had very little impact within the city. Its functions remained more or less unchanged, and its title (by now, 'City of Bath') was not altered.

The next change in the structure of local government, however, had a far greater impact on Bath. In 1974, following the local Government Act of 1972, Bath ceased to be a county borough, and became a second-tier authority, a District Council under Avon County Council. Some functions such as education and social services passed to Avon, while others, such as planning and public health remained with the city. The change was short-lived, however: another re-organisation of local government in 1996 saw Bath District Council united with the adjacent Wansdyke District Council to create Bath & North East Somerset Council. Once more an all-purpose, unitary authority, the Council is responsible for all local authority functions within its (now greatly-enlarged) area.

Functions of the Council

Despite centuries of continuity in some of the Council's functions, its powers and responsibilities have increased dramatically over time. The main focus of the medieval corporation was the maintenance of its rights and privileges and the furtherance of trade for its members, along with the acquisition and leasing of property, and the administration of justice. By the mid-sixteenth century, some civic amenities were provided, such as piped water to a small number of streets, and occasional street cleaning and repairs; but the modern concept of a council whose principal responsibility is providing for the health and well-being of its inhabitants would not have been recognised. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the provision of amenities such as paved streets, street lighting, and watching (policing) became more urgent, both for the convenience of the inhabitants and to serve the high class visitors. Not having the authority under their charters to do this work or to raise money to fund it, the corporation obtained private Acts of Parliament to enable them to carry out specific functions: Acts obtained in 1707, 1721 and 1739 gave them powers to set up a turnpike trust and to pave, clean and light city streets, and to arrange rubbish removal, for which they could charge a rate on householders. These Acts, and an Act of 1757 which sought to make parishes responsible for such services, had limited success, and the corporation turned to the solution adopted by other cities: the setting up of Commissions for specific purposes and covering specific, small areas. Such commissions were set up in Bath by Acts of Parliament in 1766, 1789, 1793 and 1801. Although the Corporation was represented on the Commissions, they were independent bodies.

The Municipal Corporations Act of 1835 initially made little change to the functions of the council, which remained limited, and for the next decade and a half the Commissions continued to be responsible for what would now be seen as basic civic services. The Commissions finally came to end in 1851, when their functions were taken over by the Council under the Bath Act of 1851. Under this Act, the Council adopted the provisions of the Public Health Act of 1848 and became the Local Board of Health for the city; this gave it powers and responsibilities in relation to public health and sanitation, such as the provision of sewers, paving and cleaning of streets, and removal of rubbish. The 1851 Act repealed all the Acts relating to Commissions, and provided that all the assets of the Commissioners were to be passed to the Council. The Council appointed a committee (the '1851 Bath Act Committee') for executing the Act. This committee came to an end in 1871, when its responsibilities were passed to the Council meeting as the Urban Sanitary Authority (for policy decisions), and to the Sanitary and Surveying Committees of the Urban Sanitary Authority (for detailed work).

During the second half of the nineteenth and first half of the twentieth centuries, the functions and responsibilities of the council - as of all city councils - expanded dramatically. Further public health responsibilities were added by the 1858, 1872 and later Public Health Acts; the Education Act of 1902 transferred responsibility for education to the council; and responsibility for poor relief was transferred from the Board of Guardians in 1929, developing into a rather differently-focussed responsibility for social welfare in the late 1940s. Some responsibility for housing was given to the council in 1909, developing into a wider responsibility for town planning in the 1930s and particularly in the 1940s and 1950s. The council also developed municipal undertakings: it had provided a water supply to a limited part of the city since the sixteenth century, but from the mid-nineteenth century this was expanded to the whole city; and it generated and supplied electricity from the 1890s.

From the second half of the twentieth century, the trend for the growth of powers and responsibilities began very gradually to be reversed. In the late 1940s, Bath City Council, like other local authorities, ceased to have responsibility for electricity and gas supplies; responsibility for water supply was lost in the 1970s. Towards the end of the twentieth century, significant changes took place which have left Bath and North East Somerset Council with, amongst other things, a very much reduced role in the provision of education and a totally transformed role in the provision of health and social services.

The area covered by the Council

The changes in structure, powers and responsibilities have been accompanied by equally dramatic changes over time in the area covered by the city. The medieval city was very small, bounded by the city walls. The 1590 Charter defined the city as a larger area, taking in land to the north-west, and a large part of the parish of Walcot, which lay outside the city walls. The 1769 local Act added a portion of Bathwick, near the river. The rest of Bathwick, along with the rest of Walcot (apart from a detached portion), and Lyncombe and Widcombe, were added to the city at the time of the Municipal Corporations Act in 1835. The 1911 Boundary Extension Act added what had been the separate villages of Twerton, Lower Weston and part of Charlcombe, while the 1951 Boundary Extension Act added further parts of Charlcombe, together with parts of Claverton, English Combe, Monkton Combe, South Stoke, and Weston. The 1967 Bath Order added the rest of Charlcombe, and parts of Batheaston, Monkton Combe and Swainswick. Bath & North East Somerset Council, the authority created in 1996, includes all the Bath City area, and extends to Keynsham in the West, and south to Midsomer Norton and Radstock, including numerous villages.

The Records

The records of the council, in all its guises, are large in quantity and complex in nature. The earliest record is the charter of 1189; property records date from the thirteenth century, financial records from the sixteenth, and minutes from the seventeenth century. The bulk of the records, however, date from the eighteenth to the twenty-first centuries, and are continuing to accrue. The records include the constitutional records of the council - the foundation documents such as charters and acts of parliament; minutes of the council and its committees; and records created by its officers and employees, relating to all aspects of its work.

System of arrangement

Many of the records have been kept in the Guildhall since their creation, some for hundreds of years; others have been stored in other council buildings, and transferred to the Record Office at various dates. Unfortunately, over at least a hundred years, numerous attempts at re-ordering and classifying the records have been made, so that the original order of much of the material has been lost. While it is fascinating to find the evidence of work carried out many years ago, this re-ordering has made the complex task of arranging and cataloguing the records to current standards even more difficult than it might otherwise have been. Organisational change and restructuring, particularly in the later twentieth century, have added to the complexity of the task.

Arrangement of the records has therefore been carried out taking a number of considerations into account:

- the basic archival principal of provenance and original order, where this is identifiable (Who created these records? What order were they kept in?)
- the function of the records (What purpose were the records created for? Has responsibility for this function changed between different departments at different dates?)
- ease of use by potential researchers (While keeping in mind the different interests of different researchers)

The result has been a pragmatic arrangement, sometimes bringing together artificially-created sub-fonds and series, because this provides the easiest method of access to researchers, while at other times keeping together seemingly disparate material because it was quite clearly created by one individual or department. The reasons for most of the arrangement decisions are given at the appropriate points in the detailed catalogue. Because inevitably records of relevance to the same subject may be found in a number of different places in the catalogue, substantial cross-referencing and information on related records is also included.

The collection has been divided into 22 'sub-fonds', some based on the creator of the records, and some comprising records brought together on a functional or thematic basis. The sub-fonds are as follows:

- BC/1 Constitutional records: Charters, Acts of Parliament, and related records of Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/2 Council and Committee Minutes and related records of Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/3 Records of the Town Clerks, Chief Executives, and related departments of Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/4 Records of Bath Municipal Courts
- BC/5 Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council Financial and Accounting Records

- BC/6 Records relating to property owned or administered by Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/7 Records relating to the responsibilities of Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council for infrastructure
- BC/8 Planning and Development Control records of Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/9 Records of the Civic Functions of the Mayors of Bath
- BC/10 Records relating to Bath City markets
- BC/11 Records relating to Bath City gaol

Extent: c.13 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Description

The records in this sub-fonds are the documents which give the Corporation or Council specific powers, rights and responsibilities and define the area within which these powers and responsibilities are to be exercised. Without these documents, the authority would not exist.

Administrative History

From 1189 until 1835, the borough of Bath existed by virtue of a series of charters granted and confirmed by the Crown. These charters gave citizens certain rights and privileges, exempted them from certain tolls and obligations, and allowed them to hold courts and administer justice. The charter of 1590 set out in detail how the city was to be administered by the corporation, although it formalised existing practice rather than establishing new systems. The main focus of the charters was on giving the tradesmen and merchants of the borough the power and privileges which would enable them to carry on their businesses as profitably as possible. At this period, there was no concept of a borough as responsible for the general well-being of its inhabitants.

The Municipal Corporations Act abolished boroughs founded by royal charters, replacing them with boroughs established by authority of the Act. The Act set out the rights and responsibilities of the new municipal boroughs, and provided for a more democratic method of election of councillors, who were to be elected by all ratepayers. Subsequent Acts of Parliament substantially revised and extended the 1835 Act, giving the council an enormous range of responsibilities touching on all aspects of the lives of the local inhabitants. Some of these Acts were general, applying to all boroughs (such as the Local Government Act of 1888), while others, such as the Bath Act of 1925, were specific to Bath.

The area covered by the council expanded enormously over the nine centuries covered by the records. The area was defined in some of the Charters, and then in the Bath-specific Acts; new Acts were required to alter the boundaries.

System of arrangement

The records in this sub-fonds are arranged as follows:

- BC/1/1 Bath City charters, 1189-1974
- BC/1/2 Acts of Parliament: national Acts affecting Bath, local Acts and Orders promoted by the Council, and local Bath Acts relating indirectly to the Council, 1835-c.1974
- BC/1/3 Papers relating to Acts of Parliament (including papers relating to the Municipal Corporations Act, Bath Acts of 1925 and 1937, boundary changes, 1911 and 1950, and local government reorganisations of 1970s and 1990s)

The records have not yet been catalogued in detail; cataloguing is continuing. Please contact the Record Office for more information.

Records of Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council: Council and Committee minutes and related records

Covering dates: 1631- present
Extent: c.170 linear metres
Level: Sub-fonds

Description and Administrative History

The Council minutes and related records form the official record of the actions and transactions of the Council, and show how the Council was carrying out its responsibilities. They include minutes of meetings of the full council and of committees, both signed and printed; agendas and summons for meetings; and accounts presented to the council and committees for approval. They also include records relating directly to Council members (councillors and aldermen) such as declarations of acceptance of office, and declarations of interest, and the papers of individual councillors.

The minutes fall into three sections:

1. Minutes of Bath City Council 1631-1974

Bath was a chartered borough up to 1835, a municipal borough 1835-1889, and a county borough 1889-1974. These changes reflect changes to the structure of local government, but they had little effect at a practical level; on the contrary, there is evidence of an enormous amount of continuity in the conduct of the council over this period. The transition from chartered borough with a corporation to a municipal borough under an elected council appears to have been seamless. The first meeting of the new council took place on 31 December 1835, with the minutes written up in the same volume as the last meeting of the old council, which took place on 24 December. The minutes are headed 'meeting ... in pursuance of an Act ...for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations'; and the councillors are listed against the names of the wards for which they were elected, but the business dealt with by the council remained completely unchanged. The change to county borough status seems to have taken place with no formality and indeed to have passed almost completely unnoticed. Not only do the minutes of the council and its committees continue in the same volumes, the first meeting of what was technically now the county borough, which took place on 2 April 1889 (the Local Government Act came into force on 1 April 1889) makes no mention whatsoever of the change. For these reasons, the minutes for the whole of the period 1631-1974 are dealt with as a whole.

2. Bath City Council, 1974-1996

In 1974, local government reorganisation brought a major change to Bath City Council. Although its name stayed the same, the Council became a District Council, a second-tier authority, under the County of Avon, with reduced functions and responsibilities. The minutes for this period form a separate entity.

3. Bath & North East Somerset Council, from 1996:

Reorganisation in 1996 produced another major change, as the County of Avon was abolished and Bath joined with the neighbouring Wansdyke District Council to form Bath and North East Somerset Council. This is a unitary authority, responsible for all services, covering Bath and the surrounding area. Again, the minutes from 1996 form a separate entity.

System of Arrangement

While it is possible to divide the minutes themselves into the three different Council entities, some of the related records (for example, declarations of councillors and books of precedents) relate to the Council across two different time periods. These have therefore been catalogued separately.

The records are arranged as follows:

BC/2/1 Minutes and related records of Bath Borough/City Council (up to 1974)

BC/2/2 Minutes and related records of Bath City Council (Bath as a District Council, 1974-1996)

BC/2/3 Minutes and related records, Bath & North East Somerset Council (from 1996, continuing to accrue)

BC/2/4 Notices of Motion, Record of Precedents, Bath City Council (up to 1974) and Bath City Council (1974-1996)

BC/2/5 Records relating to members of the Council (e.g. Declarations of Acceptance of Office)

BC/2/6 Papers of individual councillors

The records in this sub-fonds have not yet been catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing; please contact the Record office for more information.

Administrative History

The town clerk was the most important officer of the council. Until the mid-nineteenth century he was elected by the councillors: a local lawyer, he was paid only a small honorarium, and continued his private practice alongside his work for the council. He did however claim fees for specific work, which enabled him to appoint a paid deputy and office clerks to carry out the wide range of duties required by the role: he was the official solicitor to the council, attended meetings of the council and of quarter and petty sessions, witnessed oath-taking, kept records, assisted the mayor sitting as coroner, and made journeys on council business, as well as a range of other duties.

The Municipal Corporations Act of 1835 provided that a salaried town clerk had to be appointed, ending the practice of fee-based payments, and also increased the responsibilities of the clerk. As the functions and responsibilities of the Council increased from the mid-nineteenth century, so the role of the clerk expanded, and more staff were employed in what became a 'clerk's department' to carry out the work. In the twentieth century, the prominence of the town clerk within the Council declined gradually, as the numbers of administrative staff increased and other officials were appointed to head departments which became semi-independent, with budgets agreed directly with the treasurer. The title 'Town Clerk' was superseded by 'Town Clerk and Chief Executive Officer' in 1967 and by 'Chief Executive' in 1974.

This description has been compiled with reference to the following printed sources, as well as from internal evidence from the records themselves:

Trevor Fawcett, Bath Administer'd, Bath, 2001

K B Smellie, A History of Local Government, London, 1968

Content of the the Records

Since the town clerk dealt with an extremely wide range of matters, the records in this sub-fonds are extensive and diverse. They include legal documents such as sealed orders, contracts and agreements; the papers of individual town clerks and chief executives; series of letter-books; legal cases in which the Council was involved; records relating to the clerk's regulatory duties; records relating to elections; and maps and plans held by the town clerk for reference purposes. However, some of the records which were created by or which were ultimately the responsibility of the town clerk have not been included in this sub-fonds. This has been done for a number of reasons:

- for major series, such as Council minutes, because it was felt more appropriate to separate them into a distinct sub-fonds;
- for certain series, because it was felt that it would be easier for potential users - for example some civil defence records created by the clerk, which have been catalogued with other civil defence records in sub-fonds 19;
- because responsibility for a particular function later passed to a different officer or department - for example leases and other property records, originally drawn up and kept by the clerk, but later dealt with by a separate department which are catalogued in sub-fonds 6 (records relating to property owned or administered by the Council).

System of arrangement

The records are arranged as follows:

BC/3/1 Byelaws, sealing registers, sealed orders, contracts, agreements and related registers, matrixes

BC/3/2 Papers of early Town Clerks (up to about 1835). Early town clerks made no distinction between the records created in the course of their work for the council, and those created by their own legal practice. The records we hold reflect this, and include both council and private-practice material.

BC/3/3 Papers of nineteenth and twentieth century town clerks and chief executives (personal and departmental). Includes Town Clerks' papers on special subjects, papers relating to city records, Policy Committee filing 1870s-1980s.

BC/3/4 Clerks' letter books

BC/3/5 Legal cases

BC/3/6 Town Clerk's regulatory duties - registration / licensing.

Bath City Council: Records of Bath Municipal Courts

Covering dates: c.1767-c.1855

Extent: c. 2 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

Bath Corporation, like other chartered boroughs, had important judicial functions until the Municipal Corporations Act of 1835.

Two courts, the Court of Request and the Court of Record, dealt with the recovery of debts; the Assize of Bread set the price of bread according to the price of wheat; and the Coroners' court, at which the mayor was coroner ex officio, inquired into cases of sudden death.

System of Arrangement

BC/4/1 Records of the Coroner's Court

BC/4/2 Records of the Court of Record

BC/4/3 Records of the Court of Requests

BC/4/4 Records of the Assize of Bread

Some of the records in this sub-fonds have not yet been catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing. Please contact the Record Office for more information.

Related Records

The records of the Court of Quarter Sessions have been catalogued separately from the Bath City records. Quarter Sessions was a municipal court, responsible for trying misdemeanours (minor crimes), until the Municipal Corporations Act of 1835 which ended the automatic right of corporations to hold their own courts of Quarter Sessions. Bath Borough Council successfully applied to hold its own Quarter Sessions courts, which could now try more serious cases, but with magistrates appointed by the Crown instead of by the Council. The 1888 Local Government Act completely separated judicial and local government functions, and Bath City Council was no longer responsible for Quarter Sessions. The records we hold are a continuous series from 1672 to 1971 and it was therefore decided to catalogue them as one series, separate from Bath City records, in spite of the fact that the pre-1835 records are very closely linked to the City records. The reference for these records is QS.

Access Conditions

All of the records are open.

Cataloguing of the records was funded by a grant from the National Cataloguing Grants Programme for Archives awarded in 2014. The archivists carrying out the cataloguing were assisted by a dedicated team of volunteers, who are credited individually in the detailed catalogue.

Records of Bath Assize of Bread

1767-c.1810

The 1590 charter gave the Mayor the right to hold an Assize of Bread as and when it was necessary. Although in Bath the price of each type of loaf remained constant, the Assize of Bread enabled the mayor to adjust its weight according to the prevailing price of wheat in local markets. The revised authorised weight of each type of bread was announced to the bakers and spot checks were undertaken.

Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council: financial and accounting records

Covering dates: 1598-c.2000

Extent: c. 120 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Description:

The records in this sub-fonds record the financial transactions of the Council over five centuries.

Administrative History

The early records were created by the Chamberlain, who was the chief financial officer of the Corporation; he received monies due from rents, rates and property renewals, and handled loans, bequests, interest charges, bills, salaries, and freedom fees (payments made by individuals to buy the privileged status of freeman of the city). Until 1794, the Chamberlain was elected from among the Councillors, and the post was unpaid. After this date, a salaried chamberlain was appointed, from outside the Council; the post, like that of the clerk at this time, was part-time. The term 'Treasurer' was used instead of Chamberlain from 1835, when the Municipal Corporations Act required councils to appoint a salaried treasurer. The responsibilities of the treasurer increased substantially in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, as the functions of the Council grew.

Content of the the Records

The records include:

- Accounting records (account rolls, records of receipts and payments, cash books, journals and ledgers) of the Chamberlains and Treasurers, from 1598 to the late twentieth century
- rating records from 1766
- valuation records from about 1930
- filing of the Treasurers' department, twentieth century
- investments and mortgages (both mortgages loaned and mortgages taken out by the Council), nineteenth and twentieth centuries

Note that annual Abstracts of Accounts and monthly or quarterly lists of payments made, which were presented by the treasurer to the Council and/or Committees, are catalogued with the Council and Committee minutes in sub-fonds BC/2. Similarly, records of salaries paid, although technically treasurers' records, are catalogued with personnel records in sub-fonds BC/20.

The records are not yet catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing; please contact the Record Office for more information.

Access Conditions

Most of the records are open, but access to some items may be restricted in accordance with the Data Protection Act 1988.

Note

Cataloguing of the records was funded by a grant from the National Cataloguing Grants Programme for Archives awarded in 2014. The archivists carrying out the cataloguing were assisted by a dedicated team of volunteers, who are credited individually in the detailed catalogue.

Records of Bath City Council and Bath and North East Somerset Council relating to property owned or administered by the Council

Covering dates: Thirteenth to twenty-first centuries

Extent: c.254 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

Bath City Council has been the major owner of property in the city for many centuries. The records in this sub-fonds relate to the acquisition, ownership and management of this property by the Council, although a small number of the earliest records relate to the property of individuals who lodged their records with the Council for safe-keeping.

The records include excellent collections of surveys, deeds, rentals, plans and correspondence relating to about 80% of the property within the city walls as well as some outside the walls and further afield. Bath Corporation deliberately developed a property portfolio from a very early date and by 1600 it held property in its own right and as a charity trustee. Over the next four centuries it consolidated and expanded its property holdings, and remains a major property owner today.

From the 1279 Statute of Mortmain until powers were granted to it in the 1590 Charter of Elizabeth I, the Corporation was prevented from purchasing property itself. However, it was able to lease many properties from the city's priory, affording it control over their sub-letting and development. It retained these holdings after the Reformation, leasing them from the Crown estate.

Despite the limitations on its ownership of property, the Council put great effort into finding ways to hold and control city property during the 16th century, up to and beyond what was legal. For example, it arranged for property to be purchased by two men (William Sherston and John Sachfield) who were in reality buying it not as private individuals but on behalf of the Council. By the end of the 16th century the Council was responsible for about four-fifths of the property in Bath, including the hot baths, either as the owner of the freehold or as a charity trustee, for example of King Edward's School. In its role as trustee of the lands owned by St John's Hospital, the corporation controlled much of the coal mining operation in Timsbury, Littleton, Paulton and Hallatrow.

Over the succeeding centuries, the pace of development of the corporation's property portfolio was uneven. At times the Corporation adopted a passive approach, as in the first half of the eighteenth century, when it resisted development within the city walls; at other times it was active in developing the property it owned. In the second half of the eighteenth century, for example, the North and South gates of the city were demolished, residential houses were developed at Bladud's Buildings, the new Guildhall was built, and modernisation of the decayed city centre began. The Corporation also released parcels of land for development immediately outside the city.

From the mid nineteenth century, legislation allowed the Council to raise loans and buy property for a range of civic purposes, and - from late nineteenth century - the power to compulsorily purchase property and build houses for the working classes. The Art Gallery and Reference Library were built in 1897; at the same time the Council began to take more active responsibility for the housing of its inhabitants, becoming a pioneer in the provision of council housing. The Dolemeads area was one of the first to be redeveloped, together with Avon Street and Lampards buildings.

The interwar period of the twentieth-century saw the Council building major housing developments. Towards the end of the century it created fewer of its own developments, instead selling or leasing property to the commercial sector, or, as was the case with the creation of the new Thermae Bath Spa, it worked in partnership with the private sector. At the same time, almost all the council housing estate was transferred either to private ownership or to housing associations.

Content of the the Records

The records in the sub-fonds form a very significant collection. There are static snapshots of the Council's entire holdings in the form of surveys, dating from the seventeenth to the twentieth centuries. Lease registers provide detailed records of the arrangements it made with its lessees as a landlord, whilst rentals record the money paid to the council in rent. Title deeds, mainly eighteenth to twentieth centuries but with some from earlier centuries, record the Council's acquisition and disposal of land, from short-term to permanent. There are many plans, which were often created as appendices to leases, to define accurately the property conveyed by the lease. In the twentieth century, more detailed records of the management of individual properties began to be created, with one of more files per property recording transactions with lessees and the management of the fabric of properties.

System of arrangement

The records in this sub-fonds are arranged as follows:

- BC/6/1 Surveys, terriers and lease registers of property owned or administered by Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/6/2 Title deeds to properties owned by Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council, to the properties of charities administered by them, and to some other properties in Bath
- BC/6/3 Bath City Council claims to the Central Land Board for loss in the value of property due to the local land development plan, with responses from the Central Land Board
- BC/6/4 Drawings and plans of property owned by Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/6/5 Rentals (records of rent paid) of property owned by Bath City Council
- BC/6/6 Files relating to the management of property owned by Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/6/7 Records relating to the maintenance of property owned by Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/6/8 Files relating to the management and maintenance of former Avon County Council property owned by Bath & North East Somerset Council
- BC/6/9 Miscellaneous records relating to property owned by Bath City Council and Bath and North East Somerset Council
- BC/6/10 Records relating to the maintenance and management of Council Housing owned by Bath City Council

The records in this sub-fonds have not yet been catalogued in detail, and cataloguing is continuing. Please contact the Record office for more information.

Related Records

Important information on the Council's property can also be found in other sub-fonds. BC/8 contains Planning and Development Control records, which will, in particular, have information on major projects. BC/2 contains Council and Committee Minutes and related records of Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council, including the Corporate Property and Planning Committees.

Access Conditions

Most of the records are open, but access to some items may be restricted in accordance with the Data Protection Act 1988.

Bath City Council claims to the Central Land Board for loss in the value of property due to the local land development plan. Complete with responses from the Central Land Board

1948-1949

The 1947 Town and Country Planning Act required planning authorities to undertake a survey and devise a local development plan to include industrial sites, residential areas, public services and transport. Land owners lost their automatic right to develop, and now had to apply for permission.. If an application was successful, land owners would pay a development charge equal to the resulting increase in property value. If landowners lost development rights, they would be compensated, and a fund of £300 million was created by the Act to pay this compensation. A newly-established Central Land Board assessed development charges and compensation, although it is not clear that any substantial amount of compensation was ever paid out. Arrangements for the payment of compensation were changed by the 1953 Town and Country Planning Act and the Central Land Board ceased to exist in 1959.

The Council itself owned a substantial amount of property, and put in claims to the Central Land Board for loss of value on some of this property. These forms record the claims: they include the square footage of the property, the length and date of the lease, if any, the outcome of the claim, the rent paid, the names of the lessees and the use of the property on 11 July 1948.

The forms are arranged alphabetically by address of property.

relating to infrastructure

Covering dates: c.1748-c.2000
Extent: c.95 linear metres
Level: Sub-fonds

Description

This sub-fonds includes records relating to water supply, sewers, waste disposal, roads and bridges, trams, electricity supply and certain major infrastructure projects (the Hedgemoad Landslip and the Combe Down Stone Mines stabilisation project).

Administrative History

The Corporation's involvement with supplying water to the city dates back to at least the late thirteenth century, when they joined with the Priory in supplying piped water to the Priory and a small number of city streets. There is evidence of serious investment by the Corporation in the maintenance of the water network from at least the sixteenth century. This supply of water was a significant attraction to visitors to the city, even though it was initially limited to the city centre, with other areas dependent on private water supplies. However, from the mid-nineteenth century onwards the Council took advantage of general legislation as well as promoting private Acts of Parliament in order to purchase and lease new supplies of water and install water mains. By the early twentieth century it provided a water supply to the whole of the city. In the mid-1970s Wessex Water, one of ten new regional Water Authorities, took over control of the city water supply.

Early attempts by the Corporation to provide other basic amenities met with more limited success. Street paving and lighting, watching (police), rubbish collection and the abatement of 'nuisances' - all vital to a growing city with a large number of wealthy visitors - were not matters which the Corporation had the power or resources to provide. In the early eighteenth century, the Corporation obtained several private Acts of Parliament to enable it to provide certain amenities, but these failed to create consistent improvements, and a new solution was put in place in the second half of the eighteenth century with the setting up of Improvement Commissions. These Commissions, again established by private Acts of Parliament, were independent of the Corporation; covering small areas, they had powers to raise a rate to carry out certain specific functions. They provided a useful service until they came to an end in 1851, when they were taken over by the Council under the Bath Act of that year.

The 1851 Bath Act marked a significant turning-point in the provision of civic amenities and urban infrastructure, and was prompted in part by a concern for public health. This concern was not restricted to Bath: just three years before, in 1848, the Public Health Act had been passed, setting out a number of powers relating to public health which could be adopted (if they wished) by borough councils or by newly-created local boards of health. Bath adopted most of the provisions of the 1848 Public Health Act by means of the 1851 Bath Act, but also added a number of additional, Bath-specific powers and measures. Among the wide-ranging powers and responsibilities the Council gained under the Act was responsibility for sewers and drainage, waste disposal, paving, cleaning and lighting of streets, and the authority to create certain new streets; they were able to raise money to carry out work through mortgages and bonds, as well as by raising a rate; and they were empowered to appoint officers such as a surveyor, an inspector of nuisances and a medical officer of health (although they did not do so immediately). Subsequent legislation gave the Council further substantial powers and responsibilities with regard to infrastructure matters such as sewers, street development and waste disposal, and by the mid twentieth century the city engineer and city surveyor led substantial departments. Responsibility for sewerage passed to Wessex Water Authority in the mid-1970s.

The Council also generated and supplied electricity to the city from the late nineteenth to the mid twentieth centuries. Streets in the city centre were first provided with electric lighting in 1890, with the Council entering into an agreement with the Bath Electric Lighting and Engineering Company Ltd. In 1896, the Council purchased the electricity undertaking from the Company and continued to manufacture and supply electricity until 1948, when the electricity industry was nationalised. During this period, the enterprise grew from the provision of electric street lighting to a small number of streets and a handful of private properties adjacent to the mains, to the provision of an electricity supply to private consumers across the whole city.

By contrast, while the Council actively promoted the development of tramways, it was not directly involved with their construction or operation: this was carried out by private companies, which provided first horse-drawn and then electric trams between 1880 and 1939. The Council was however very closely involved with the supervision of the construction of tramways and with the regulation of trams; they were also concerned with their impact on street works, traffic and council property.

Content of the the Records

This sub-fonds includes records relating to:

- Water supply
- Sewers, drainage and waterways (including maps)
- Waste disposal
- Highways, bridges, vaults and car parks
- Trams
- Electricity supply
- Hedgemoad landslip
- Combe Down Stone Mines stabilisation project

Note that it does not include records relating to:

- some major road schemes which were also major town planning/housing projects (for example the East-West Relief Road proposed in the 1970s); these are in sub-fonds BC/8 (Planning and Development Control records)
- public health matters for which the Medical Officer of Health was responsible, such as food quality, registration of slaughterhouses or registration of canal boats; these are catalogued under sub-fonds BC/14, (Records of the Council's Responsibilities for Public Health)

The records have not yet been catalogued in detail; cataloguing is continuing. Please contact the Record Office for more information.

Administrative History

Bath City Council took an active role in planning aspects of the city environment from at least the second half of the eighteenth century, when, together with the Bath Improvement Commissioners, the Council embarked on the redevelopment of city centre properties which it owned, and the creation and widening of city centre streets. However, both the powers and the ambitions of the Corporation were very limited at this date. This began to change in the second half of the nineteenth century, when the Council gained the first of the powers which ultimately enabled it to exercise a large degree of control over building standards and strategic planning and development within the city. The expansion of these powers was slow and intermittent at first but much more rapid from the second quarter of the twentieth century.

In the mid-nineteenth century, the Council gained the first of its development control powers: the power to regulate the construction and sanitation of new buildings. The 1858 Public Health Act allowed local authorities to pass bye-laws regulating how houses were to be built, to ensure that they met minimum requirements for sanitation and quality of building. Bath City Council passed its first building regulation bye-laws under the Act in 1866 and 1868.

For the next hundred years, one of the most important factors influencing the move to control building development was a concern for public health and the provision of adequate housing for the working classes. Later nineteenth-century public health acts strengthened the powers of local authorities over building standards and sanitation, while a series of housing acts between 1890 and 1903 gave them the power to clear slums, compulsorily purchase property, and to build new houses. The Council was taking advantage of these new powers by the late 1890s, demolishing unfit housing; building of new houses began in the early 1900s. The Dolemeads area was one of the first to be redeveloped, together with Avon Street and Lampards buildings.

A number of further housing and town planning acts were passed between 1909 and 1932; their primary focus remained the provision of sufficient good quality housing, but in conjunction with this they also began to consider issues of strategic town planning. In Bath, with its large number of historic buildings, there was a greater awareness than in some other cities of the need for effective town planning, including the preservation of historic buildings and control of the appearance and location of new buildings. However, none of the existing Acts provided sufficient powers for the Council to control new building in the way it wished. To solve the problem, a clause was inserted in the 1925 Bath Corporation Act (a private Act of Parliament dealing with a number of matters) to enable the Council to pass building regulation bye-laws making it necessary for those intending to construct a new building to deposit drawings of its elevation. The clause also allowed the council to establish a small Advisory Committee of non-councillors who would examine the drawings and advise the Council that proposals for buildings which were unsuitable in a location should be refused permission; the decision of the Committee, which included a qualified architect and a professional surveyor, was binding. This pioneering 'Bath Clause', was regarded as a model of good practice, and was later adopted in the private acts of other cities and towns, including Bristol.

By the early 1920s, it was recognised that there were advantages in local authorities working together in developing planning schemes for larger areas. Such joint working was made possible by the 1923 Housing Act, and confirmed and extended by later Acts. The Bath and Bristol and District Joint Regional Planning Committee was set up in December 1923; it consisted of representatives of the cities of Bristol and Bath and a number of Urban District and Rural District Councils in Somerset and Gloucestershire, with observers from Gloucestershire and Somerset County Councils. The Committee met infrequently after the first year, and came to an end in 1937. Its main achievement appears to be the report it commissioned from Professor Patrick Abercrombie and B F Brueton, which was published in 1930 as the 'Bristol and Bath Regional Planning Scheme'.

This report recognised that it might be necessary to set up joint committees covering smaller, more localised planning areas for specific purposes. Following the 1932 Town and Country Planning Act such a committee was set up: the Bath and District Joint Planning Committee, which consisted of Bath and a number of adjacent parishes in Bathavon Rural District Council. The 1932 Act authorised the making of schemes with respect to the development and planning of both unbuilt land and built-up areas, setting out what development (if any) would be permitted in them. While a scheme was being prepared, interim orders to permit or refuse development could be given, under the Town and Country Planning (General Interim Development) Order 1933; this would protect the developer from the risk of having to remove or alter buildings once the scheme was finalised. The Bath and District Joint Planning Committee received permission to prepare a scheme in July 1934. From this date, those wishing to build or make alterations could apply to the Council for an Interim Order; although it is not clear that everyone did so, a substantial amount of Interim Order planning applications have survived from this period.

In 1937, the Council obtained another private Act of Parliament. The Bath Act 1937 included, amongst other things, much relating to planning matters. In particular, it allowed the Council to make major alterations to the city centre, including moving the Royal National Hospital for Rheumatic Diseases to a new site and removing or altering certain buildings to widen roads. It also provided for the compilation of a list of all buildings erected before 1820; for buildings on this list, it was necessary to obtain planning permission for any alterations. However, very little was done to implement the Act before the proposals were brought to an end by outbreak of war in 1939.

Bath suffered extensive bomb damage in 1942, during the Second World War. In 1943, the Bath and District Joint Planning Committee asked Professor Abercrombie, John Owens (Bath City Engineer) and H A Mealand (Planning Officer to the Joint Committee) to prepare proposals for the 'replanning' of Bath. The resulting report was presented at an exhibition in February 1945, and published as the 'Plan for Bath'.

Only a small number of the proposals in the report were accepted by the Council. They were incorporated into the local development plan which the Council was required to compile under the 1947 Town and Country Planning Act. This Act, which came into force in July 1948, brought in major changes and is usually regarded as marking the beginning of the current planning system. For the first time, it became compulsory to apply for planning permission to develop land or buildings. Councils were also given powers to preserve buildings of architectural or historic interest - marking the beginning of the system for 'listing' historic buildings. The local development plan for Bath was completed by 1952, approved by central government in 1955, and published in 1958.

The plan designated certain areas of the city as Comprehensive Development Areas, where substandard housing was to be demolished. Much of this housing, which had been given a Grade III listing, comprised Georgian 'artisans dwellings', and its demolition in the period from the late 1950s to the early 1970s led to considerable controversy. While the Council saw demolition as the best approach to the need to provide adequate housing as speedily as possible, others thought that renovation would have enabled the preservation of a significant part of the built heritage and given context to the iconic Georgian buildings which were preserved.

At the same time as tackling issues of substandard housing, the Council was seeking solutions to the problems caused by the amount of traffic passing through the streets of the city centre. In 1964 it commissioned Colin Buchanan and Partners to carry out a planning and transport study of Bath; the result of the study was a proposal for a tunnel to take traffic travelling from east to west of the city. The proposal was debated by the Council in 1971, but again aroused controversy.

The 1970s saw the development of a major 'Save Bath' campaign, backed by the Bath Preservation Trust and many others, opposing numerous Council actions and proposals. The campaign was not limited to local interest groups: 'The Sack of Bath' by Adam Fergusson, published in 1973 and a 'Save Bath' article in the 'Architectural Review' in 1975 ensured that the issues received national coverage. However, the period also saw a change in Council policies: in 1976, a Conservation Study Team was set up to examine how a practical programme for conservation could be established. The resultant report, 'Saving Bath', published in 1978, was optimistic that most conservation problems could be solved. The availability of central government grants to renovate old houses, introduced by the Housing Act of 1969, helped to consolidate this change to a policy of repair and restoration rather than demolition. The change in attitude was signified by the Council's employment of conservation architects from the mid-1970s, whose records (in BC/8/8) comprise a significant record of Bath's buildings. In 1979, after years of debate and consultations, the proposed east-west tunnel was also abandoned, on grounds of cost.

As part of the re-organisation of local government in 1974, Bath had become a second-tier authority, under Avon County Council. Responsibility for local planning matters, however, remained with the city: it continued to develop local plans, and to regulate building development. Avon County Council was responsible for developing a structure plan for the whole Avon area. In 1996, with the re-organisation which resulted in the creation of Bath & North East Somerset Council, the authority once more became responsible for all aspects of planning.

Content of the the Records and System of arrangement

The records in this sub-fonds are extensive, and provide an unrivalled source of information both for those researching the history of particular buildings or major projects, and for those looking at the history of planning and development in Bath. They are arranged as follows:

- BC/8/1 Records relating to planning strategy, including local and regional structure plans.
- BC/8/2 Records relating to major development and planning projects, and public planning enquiries.
- BC/8/3 Records relating to slum clearance and building of council housing
- BC/8/4 Filing relating to planning matters
- BC/8/5 Housing filing: records relating to the Council's responsibilities under various Housing Acts including rent control
- BC/8/6 Records relating to applications for planning approval
- BC/8/7 Records relating to applications for building regulations approval
- BC/8/8 Records relating to conservation and listing of historic buildings

BC/8/9 Records of the Sites and Monuments Record Officer

BC/8/10 Records relating to landscape, open spaces, commons and rights of way

BC/8/11 Reports and publications from the former Planning Department library

BC/8/12 Planning department slides and photographs

The records are not yet catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing; for more information, contact the Record Office.

Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council: records of the civic functions of the Mayors of Bath

Covering dates: 1778-continuing

Extent: c.46 linear metres; c.300 boxes

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

The first documented reference to a mayor is 1230, and the role continues today – though in a rather different form and with very reduced responsibilities.

From the medieval period to the early nineteenth century the mayor was the most powerful figure in the Corporation, effectively both chief executive and chief justice. His executive power was reduced during the nineteenth century and his judicial role came to an end; however, he was still a significant figure through his position as chair of the Council, until the local government reorganisation of 1996 which created Bath & North East Somerset Council.

Throughout this period, the mayor also had a ceremonial and civic role: he or she represented and promoted the city at engagements, received and entertained distinguished visitors, supported citizens and the local community in a number of ways, and led appeals for funds for a wide range of causes. As a figurehead for the city, he or she also received a number of requests for intervention in personal matters. It is this aspect of the Mayoral role which continues to the present day: the Bath Charter Trustees were set up in 1996 to maintain the traditions and functions of the Mayor and hold historic and ceremonial property. All the members of Bath & North East Somerset Council who represent wards within the city of Bath are members of the Charter Trustees, and the Mayor is elected annually from among the trustees. He or she is an ambassador for the city, promoting Bath nationally and internationally, and supporting the local community.

Content of the the Records

The records in this sub-fonds relate to the mayors' ceremonial and civic role. They include a wide range of material, such as appeals for subscriptions, records relating to Bath and royalty, the mayors' attendance at functions and engagements, and presentations to members of the public. They also include significant material relating to both the First World War (1914-1918) and the Second World War (1939-1945), the International Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862, and the Bath Pageant of 1909; other items of note are the minutes of the 'American War Committee' of 1782, and of the 'Bath Loyal Association' of 1792-1793

System of Arrangement

The records are arranged as follows:

- BC/9/1 Minutes and Accounts of the American War Committee
- BC/9/2 Bath Loyal Association records
- BC/9/3 Records of funding and subscription appeals
- BC/9/4 Records of the Mayors of Bath relating to royalty
- BC/9/5 Scrap books relating to the civic functions of the Mayors of Bath
- BC/9/6 Mayors of Bath: Business Files
- BC/9/7 Files relating to the Mayor of Bath's civic functions during the First World War

- BC/9/8 Papers relating to the funerals of civic dignitaries
- BC/9/9 Records relating to International Exhibitions
- BC/9/10 Records relating to the Bath Pageant of 1909
- BC/9/11 Records of Presentations of the Mayor of Bath's long-service medal

- BC/9/12 Mayor of Bath's Visitors Books
- BC/9/13 Miscellaneous records

Access Conditions

Most of the records are open, but access to some items may be restricted in accordance with the Data Protection Act 1988.

Note

Cataloguing of the records was funded by a grant from the National Cataloguing Grants Programme for Archives awarded in 2014. The archivists carrying out the cataloguing were assisted by a dedicated team of volunteers, who are credited individually in the detailed catalogue.

| BC/9/1   | Minutes and Accounts of the American War Committee established by the Mayor of Bath The American War committee was set up to encourage men to enlist in the armed forces at the time of the American War of Independence. It asked for subscribers to donate sums of money, which were then used to pay those enlisting a sum of 3 guineas above the bounty already being paid for enlistment. The volume includes the minutes and accounts of the committee, names of subscribers, and details of those receiving the bounty (name, occupation and parish). Many of those enlisting came from outside Bath, especially Wiltshire. 1 vol. | 1778      |
| BC/9/2   | Bath Loyal Association records 'An Association for preserving Liberty and Property and the Constitution against Levellers and Republicans', otherwise known as the Bath Loyal Association, was set up under the auspices of the Mayor at the time of the French Revolution (1789-1799). It declared loyalty to the King and Constitution against 'the wild doctrine of Equality newly propagated', and invited 'all good and loyal subjects' to show their support by signing a book to be made available in the Guildhall. 3 vols.   | 1792-1797 |

| BC/9/2/3 | 'Alphabetical List of the Bath Loyal Association' This volume is a fair copy of the subscription volume (BC/9/2/2), with the names sorted alphabetically by first letter of their surname. Note that there are some discrepancies between the two volumes. A transcription of the volume is available in the Record Office searchroom, and the names are all included in the online Bath Ancestors database (http://www.batharchives.co.uk/bath-ancestors) 1 vol.   | 1793        |
| BC/9/3   | Records of funding and subscription appeals made by the Mayors of Bath The Mayor of Bath headed appeals for funds for a wide variety of causes. Some appeals were for disasters - local, national or international - others for funds to receive visiting dignitaries or groups or to make presentations to prominent people. Some appeals created a large amount of records, others simply one or two items. It is not clear how these records were originally kept, but at some stage they were collected together and arranged in date order. This order has for the most part been kept. Note that appeals for funds after about 1910 are to be found in the Mayors' Business files (BC/9/6/4) Catalogued by Jessica Smith and Daisy Banwell, archive volunteers, as part of the 'Bath, Water and World Heritage: the city records from the 12th to the 21st centuries' project, funded by the National Cataloguing Grants Programme for Archives, 2015. 25 boxes | 1813-c.1910 |

Mayors of Bath: Business Files

This filing series, created by the Mayors' Office, relates to the ceremonial functions and responsibilities of the Mayors of Bath and covers a very wide variety of different topics. Matters dealt with include (among other things) the engagements of the Mayors, their appeals for relief funds, presentations to individuals and groups, visits to Bath by dignitaries, relationships with royalty and hospitality. In addition, as the Mayor was seen as having the power to intervene in matters on personal basis (especially in the first half of the twentieth century), the files contain information on a wide range of individual cases. There is a considerable amount of material relating to the Second World War and the early post-war period. Some files relating to the First World War originally formed part of the series, but became separated; these have been kept as a separate series (BC/9/7).

1905-continuing

We have kept the original filing system and numbering sequence, although the system changed over time and has a number of internal inconsistencies. The series includes large sub-series of files relating to general correspondence, functions, engagements, funds, presentations and some other matters, but there are also sub-series which consist of only one file dealing with a single issue.

There are a number of gaps in the numbering sequence. These occur either because files were not received by the Record Office or because the number was not used. The following series were not received, and are presumed destroyed: 7 ('Miscellaneous', consisting of two files, no dates given); 18 (Mayors' Visits to local firms) 1952; 30 (Forms relating to engagements); 35 (Mayor's Chaplain); 51 (persons rendered homeless by enemy action 1941) ; 72 (new entrants to the Local Government Service). The numbers 22-23, 37-40, 42-45, 47 and 50 do not appear to have been used in the filing scheme.

Within each sub-series of files there are also gaps in the numbering sequence, caused for the most part by files up to about 1938 being sent for paper salvage (recycling) during or immediately after World War II. Gaps are noted in the descriptions of each sub-series.

Additions to the series are received regularly. The original file numbering system is no longer used by the Mayors' Office, and files are simply given titles. On receipt, they are added into the series at the appropriate point and given a relevant reference number.

Access to some files may be restricted under the Data Protection Act 1988

| BC/9/6/3 | Mayors' business files. Mayors' Engagements.These files contain information regarding the engagements and commitments of the Mayors.Files 1-46 were sent for paper salvage (recycling) in 1942 and 1949. The first file in the series is therefore BC/9/6/5/47. Note also that numbers 89-93 in the filing sequence were not used.Files up to around 1960 are arranged chronologically, whilst later files are arranged by individual Mayor. These later files also include general correspondence and engagements which the mayor was unable to attend.13 boxes | 1937-2009       |

| BC/9/6/4 | Mayors' business files. Appeals for Funds.These files contain information on mayors' appeals for funds on behalf of a wide range of organisations and for a variety of local and national concerns.A number of the files originally numbered 1-48 are marked in the file lists as sent for paper salvage in 1949. However, not all the files appear to have actually been sent; | 1906-2011       |

moreover, where files were sent for salvage some of the file numbers were subsequently re-used. File numbers 6-12 relate to fund-raising activities during the First World War, and although marked as sent for salvage they survived; they have however been removed from this series and united with very similar files, found separately, and are catalogued as BC/9/7. For these reasons, file numbers 6-12, 15-23, 26-34, 35-38 and 41-44 do not appear in this series.

File numbers 48 and 63 appear not to have been received by the Record Office. File numbers 73-99 were not used in the filing scheme.

For earlier appeals for funds, before the Mayors' Business filing series was set up, see BC/9/3

BC/9/7                        Files relating to the Mayor of Bath's civic functions during the First World War                    1915-1919

This is a small series of files which deal with a range of matters relating to the civic functions of the mayor during the First World War (1914-1918), such as appeals for funds, organisation of voluntary work, requests for intervention in personal cases, and the arrangement of peace celebrations. Some files deal with specific matters, while others are files of general correspondence.

The files were originally part of the Mayors' Business files series, but became separated, probably during the Second World War, when many files were sent for salvage (waste paper for recycling). The files were indeed marked on an old filing list as 'Salvage', but were in fact retained; they were kept separately from the main series, apart from a small number which were subsequently re-incorporated with new reference numbers. We have now combined both the separate files and the renumbered ones to re-form the original series; we were unable to give it the original series number as recorded in the filing list, as this number was re-used in a later revision of the filing system, so we have decided to keep this small series separate from the main series of Mayors' Business Files.

It has not been possible to discover the original order of the Individual files within the series, so they have therefore been placed in date order.

Note that files relating to the Mayors' civic functions during the Second World War can be found in the main series of Mayors' Business Files (BC/9/6).

Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council: records relating to Bath City markets

Covering dates: c.1776-c.1990

Extent: c.3 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

The first charters to grant the right to hold fairs and markets in Bath were issued not to the citizens of Bath but to the Bishop of Bath and Wells. One is dated 1284 and the second 1371; by the latter date there was a well-established pattern of market days. Bath City Council seems to have gained the rights to the market in a piecemeal fashion. A 1447 charter gives the Mayor the right to enforce weights and measures in Bath, an important aspect of role of a clerk of the market. A 1545 charter to the Mayor and Citizens grants the right to hold an annual fair, and the 1590 charter confirms the City Council's customary rights to fairs and markets.

Old maps of Bath show the market in the middle of the High Street. In the 17th and early 18th centuries the Market House or Guildhall was a free-standing building set up on pillars with an open market space underneath. There would in addition have been many open-air stalls in the surrounding street. By the 1700s the Butchers' market or Shambles was in the space between the High Street and the river, where the Guildhall now stands.

Council records from the 1700s show how the everyday running of the markets was managed. The income from the rents of stall-holders was always quite considerable, which made the markets a worthwhile business enterprise for the Corporation. The Mayor was clerk of the market but leased out their management to two Market Bailiffs who collected the rents as profit and dealt with day to day affairs. They also had a supervisory role and could challenge underhand practices and illegal trading. In 1745 permanent stalls for the butchers were built, and in 1762 permanent stalls for the vegetable market were constructed at the same site, with a weigh-house for hides and skins. From 1767 the market was held daily.

The 'Bath Act' of 1766, sponsored by the Corporation, established commissioners who carried out a number of improvements in the city, including relocating the provisions market away from the High Street. The market was moved behind the corporation's newly-completed Guildhall in 1777. The old market-house and Guildhall in the centre of the High Street was demolished.

The new market lay-out created a crescent of neat, numbered and covered stalls that wrapped round the Guildhall on its north, south and east sides, approached by formal entrances off High Street. These were grouped by trade, with separate sections for poultry, meat, fish, fruit, vegetables, potatoes, butter and, strangely, shoes. This arrangement continued until 1862, when the present market building with its circular glass and iron dome, was constructed. The size of the old market was much reduced, but mostly brought under cover. A further reduction in the trading area came in the 1890s when the north and south extensions were added to the Guildhall, and the Empire hotel was built.

Despite a rising number of food-shops in Bath, the market remained essential for the distribution of perishable produce, both wholesale and retail, for an area of at least ten miles well into the twentieth-century. The provisions market next to the Guildhall remains the property of Bath & North East Somerset Council today.

The corn and cattle market opened in Walcot Street in 1811 and had closed by the late 1940s.

Bath City Council: Records relating to Bath City gaol

Covering dates: Eighteenth - nineteenth centuries

Extent: c. 2 linear metres; 6 boxes, 1 volume, 1 bundle

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

The main purpose of Bath City gaol was to house debtors, minor offenders, and prisoners facing serious charges, though the latter would quickly be transferred to a county prison.

A new gaol built by Thomas Attwood was opened in Grove Street in 1772, replacing the old gaol which had been situated in the redundant church of St Mary's Northgate. However, the Grove Street gaol was never fit-for-purpose and became very overcrowded. It was in turn replaced by a new gaol in Twerton in 1842. This was closed in 1877, when the government took over all gaols under the Prison Act.

Content of the the Records

Only a small quantity of records relating to the city gaol have survived. They include:

- Bath Gaol papers, eighteenth-nineteenth centuries
- Gaol committee draft minutes, tenders and correspondence, 1861-1877
- Bonds for the office of gaoler, 1782-1818
- Gaol cash book 1840-1867

Bath City Council: Records relating to the work of the Watch Committee

Covering dates: c.1750-c.1965

Extent: c.18 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Description

This sub-fonds includes a small amount of records relating to Bath City Council's police, fire and ambulance services, and related work of the Watch Committee.

Administrative History

Bath City Police Force was set up in 1836 following the Municipal Corporations Act of 1835, which required boroughs to organise and maintain a police force. It replaced the three parish-based police forces which had covered the City, Walcot and Bathwick until this date, along with the night-watch. It consisted initially of 132 officers, and was organised and administered by the City Watch Committee from 1836 to 1966. In 1966, it was amalgamated with Somerset Constabulary to form the Somerset and Bath Constabulary, which came into being on 1 January 1967, and was no longer under the control of Bath City Council. At this point, almost all of the records of the Police Force were transferred to the newly-formed force. The records were later deposited in the Record office, together with post-1966 records, and were catalogued at 0661, as a private deposit from the Avon and Somerset Constabulary. A very small amount of early Bath City police records remained with the Council, and these have been included in the records catalogued in this sub-fonds.

As well as the Police Force, the Watch committee supervised the Bath Fire and Ambulance Service, 1928-1973 (except for a short period during the Second World War). Responsibility for fighting fires in Bath passed from the local insurance offices to a combined force of Police and volunteers in 1891. The Corporation of Bath assumed control in 1909. From 1941 to 1948 the Fire Brigade was part of the National Fire Service (Area 17). In 1974, following the re-organisation of local government the force became part of the County of Avon Fire Brigade, and no longer under Bath City control.

The Watch Committee had a range of other responsibilities related to public safety, such as implementation of the Explosives and Poisons Acts and road safety.

Content of the the Records

Records in this sub-fonds include a limited amount of material relating to:

- Watch committee papers, including police and fire services, 1830s-c.1900
- Explosives Acts, 1870s-1910
- General filing relating to the work of the Watch Committee, including wartime records, 1930s-1960s
- General filing relating to Public Safety, including accidents, Poisons Act, highways, 1960s - 1970s
- Bath Police Force regulations, 1853-1880
- Papers relating to the new Police Station at Orange Grove, 1860s
- Fire Brigade log books, 4 vols., 1907-1931 (former reference 0578)
- Bath City Fire Brigade and Ambulance Service, c.1928-1973 (former reference 0282)
- Fire Brigade Annual Reports, 1930s-70s

Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council: records relating to Bath as a Spa, and to culture, leisure and tourism

Covering dates: c.1750-c.2000

Extent: c.23 linear metres; 54 boxes; 4 volumes; 4 bundles

Level: Sub-fonds

Description:

The records in this sub-fonds were created in the course of the Council's administration of Bath's cultural, tourist and leisure facilities, including the Roman Baths and Pump Room, the Assembly Rooms, the library and art gallery, the summer band, Bath Assembly, and other leisure amenities.

Administrative History

Bath's name indicates how closely its identity is linked to the thermal spa waters, unique in Britain. For centuries, the wealth which visitors have brought with them to the spa has been a mainstay of the local economy. It is not surprising then that Bath City Council, and Bath and North East Somerset Council in its turn, have been involved in the development and management of the waters and of other amenities for visitors.

The Roman spa town of Aquae Sulis dates from the first to fourth centuries AD. The baths continued to be used during Saxon times, though in a reduced form. In the 7th century, a monastery was established, and Bath became an important centre for Christianity. The baths were under church control with the main spring building being rebuilt in the late 11th to mid-12th centuries. There was a Royal lodging in Bath in the thirteenth century, with at least one bath.

Bath Corporation took control of the baths in 1554, as part of the Abbey property which they acquired following the dissolution of the monasteries. To manage them, a keeper of the baths was appointed. The keeper paid a rent to the council, making profits from tips from the clientele. The job was customarily offered to the city's Sergeant at Arms.

The period 1575 - 1600, was one of significant investment by the Corporation in the baths. In 1572, they built the New Bath for women, later known as the Queen's Bath. They also started the restoration of the Abbey; the city's many visitors required somewhere suitable to worship. Queen Elizabeth visited in 1574, making Bath even more fashionable. Other leading courtiers made repeated visits. A lepers' bath for people suffering from skin diseases was added to the King's Bath in the 1570s, and the Horse Bath (which was indeed for horses and other animals) was built just outside the city.

In 1684 the Council began appointing a pumper with responsibility for the drinking waters. At the beginning of the eighteenth century, the season (the time when fashionable visitors came to Bath) extended across the summer only, due to poor road conditions at other times of the year. As transport improved, two seasons developed, spring and autumn. Later the season was all year round except for the summer, which was considered too hot for bathing.

Trevor Fawcett ('Bath City Council Members, 1700-1835', unpublished typescript, 2014) notes that the majority of eighteenth century councillors were dependent on Bath's tourist trade; they included innkeepers, apothecaries, surgeons and physicians. The council promoted the trade through developments such as the gravel walks and the Pump Room, which was built in 1706, and re-built in the 1790s. The Duke of Kingston opened his private baths in the 1760s, in competition with the Corporation Baths. The Council responded with the rebuilding of the Hot Bath in the 1770s including private baths. The Cross Bath was re-built in 1784 and the 1790s.

In the nineteenth century, the popularity of sea-bathing led to a decline in Bath's visitor numbers. In 1859 a new water fountain was built in Stall Street providing free spa drinking water to all who wanted it. Leisure swimming was also introduced with the Tepid baths of 1829 and the New Royal baths of 1870.

From the 1870s extensive Roman remains began to be uncovered. As understanding of the significance of the site grew, Bath began to develop a new role as a destination for heritage tourism.

By the late 1800s, the Council had decided they should bring the spa facilities up to date. Council officers took a tour of European spas and the bathing facilities were rebuilt; the New Queen's Bath opened in 1889, with rebranded treatments alongside new continental treatments. It was a success with over 100 000 using the spa in 1890. This led to an increased need for accommodation; the Grand Pump Room Hotel was built in 1869 and the Empire hotel in 1901.

The First World War (1914-1918) saw many injured servicemen treated in Bath. The Second World War (1939-1945) damaged the spa's infrastructure, particularly the hotels, and after the war, spa therapy became unfashionable. The withdrawal of NHS funding for spa treatments in 1976 was another major blow.

The tragic death of a girl from an infection contracted from contaminated spa water in 1978 led to the stopping of all supplies of mineral water and the end of centuries of bathing.

A new, safe supply of spa water was established in 1983, and the baths were given a new lease of life when the Council instigated the development of a 21st century spa; the Thermae Bath spa opened in 2006 and attracted over one million visitors in its first five years.

Bath City Council: records relating to public health

Covering dates: c.1866-c.1960

Extent: 6 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

The 1851 Bath Act gave the Council a number of responsibilities relating to public health, and empowered it to appoint a Medical Officer of Health. Not all the powers were acted on immediately, and the first Medical Officer of Health was not appointed until 1866.

Content of the the Records

The records in this sub-fonds comprise records created by the Medical Officer of Health, the Public Analyst, and the Sanitary Inspector, together with a small number created by the Town Clerk's department. They have been gathered together here for convenience of users. They include:

- Reports of the Medical Officer of Health (various series)
- Canal boats - registers, appointment of Inspector
- Registers of premises and tradesmen (slaughter houses, milk, margarine etc.)
- Public Analyst - register of samples received
- Notices issued [to individuals] under Public Health Acts
- Reports on house inspections, mid C20
- Papers relating to the creation of the statutory hospital, Claverton Down
- Printed guide to the Public Health services of Bath City 1939

Note that records relating to sanitation infrastructure (for example water supply, sewerage) can be found in sub-fonds BC/7 (records of infrastructure).

The records have not been catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing; please contact the Record Office for more information.

Bath City Council: Records of Bath Education Authority

Covering dates: c.1892-c.1974

Extent: c.15 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Description:

The records in this sub-fonds relate to Bath City Council's responsibility for different aspects of education from the late nineteenth to the late twentieth centuries.

Administrative History

The Council's earliest responsibility was for technical education: the Technical Education Act of 1889 enabled county boroughs (of which Bath was one) to levy a rate to provide such education. The Council took advantage of the opportunity offered by the Act, and the Science, Art and Technical School opened in 1894 in a building at the north end of the Guildhall.

The Education Act of 1902 gave the Council responsibility for providing education at other levels. This Act marked a major change in the provision of education, transferring to local authorities substantial powers and responsibilities. County boroughs, including Bath, were given responsibility for providing elementary education: they took over the schools which until then had been provided by local school boards, and also (by agreement) schools which had been provided by religious denominations; denominational schools which wished could remain independent of council control, but they were aided by a contribution towards their maintenance. In addition, county boroughs were permitted to provide secondary (grammar school) education if they wished. From 1903 onwards, when the Act came into force, the provision of education was a significant part of the responsibilities of the Council - and one which grew substantially during the course of the twentieth century. Acting as the Bath Education Authority, the Council provided elementary schools across the city, some with senior departments for older pupils. It also gradually provided secondary (grammar school) education for a limited number of pupils, first within the Science, Art and Technical School, and then in new buildings: the City of Bath Girls school was opened in 1922 and the City of Bath Boys School in 1932.

The 1944 Education Act introduced free secondary education for all; it was intended that selection at the age of 11 would allocate pupils to either a grammar, technical, or 'modern' school, according to aptitude and ability. In practice different local authorities introduced slightly differing systems. Bath Education Authority adopted the tri-partite system for boys (grammar, technical and 'modern' schools), but a bi-partite system (grammar and 'modern' schools) for girls. A major school building programme was undertaken between the 1950s and the early 1970s: 12 new infants or junior schools were built, 4 secondary schools were rebuilt on new sites, and several other secondary schools were enlarged. The Technical College moved to new premises on Avon Street (it later left local authority control, becoming independent as the City of Bath College).

In 1965, local authorities were asked by the government to plan for a move to comprehensive secondary education. In 1967, Bath Education Committee approved a scheme for changing to comprehensive schools, and selection at 11 was abolished in 1973.

In the local government reorganisation of 1974, Bath City Council lost its responsibility for education, which was transferred to Avon County Council. Responsibility for education was returned when Bath & North East Somerset Council was created in 1996. However, following the Academies Act of 2010 most secondary and a small number of primary schools have left Council control and become independent academies.

A voluntary committee organised a Children's Dinner Fund for needy children from 1904, but a school meals service for all was not set up until after the Second World War. The first School Meals organiser was appointed in 1946; kitchens and dining rooms were built in schools, or space was adapted to provide them.

This description was compiled with reference to:

The Education Committee of Bath City Council, Unwillingly to School. An Account of the Education Service of the City of Bath 1870-1970, Bath, 1974

Content of the the Records

Given the importance of education in the responsibilities of the Council throughout the twentieth century, the quantity and significance of the records which have survived and been transferred to the Record Office is disappointing. Some records were transferred to Avon County Council on re-organisation in 1974, although a small number have since been returned. No records post-1996 have been received by the Record Office.

The records include:

- financial and accounting records
- staff records
- a small amount of records relating to school meals
- a small amount of filing and miscellaneous material, including deeds and records relating to forward planning and reorganisations

The records are not yet catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing; please contact the Record Office for more information.

Bath City Council: records relating to parks, allotments and cemeteries

Covering dates: c.1850-c. 1985

Extent: c.18 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Description

The records in this sub-fonds relate to the Council's responsibilities for parks (including playing fields), allotments and cemeteries. Parks and cemeteries were for many years dealt with by the same committee; allotments were dealt with by a separate committee until 1955, when responsibility passed to the Parks Committee.

Administrative History

Cemeteries

By the early nineteenth century, many church graveyards were full, and it became necessary to provide new burial grounds. In an attempt to solve this problem, the Burial Act of 1853 enabled parish vestries to establish burial boards, if they so wished, to provide and manage new burial grounds. These burial boards, consisting of between three and nine parish ratepayers, could purchase land for a cemetery and provide chapels; money was to be raised through a precept on the poor rates. In Bath, seven burial boards were set up by parish vestries: the first five, Bathwick, Lyncombe and Widcombe and St James, St Michael's, St Saviour's, and Walcot in 1859; a sixth, Weston, was set up by 1877, and a seventh, Twerton, in 1880.

Later Acts permitted various types of local authorities to set up burial boards, or to take over existing boards. In Bath, the City Council took over all the burial boards in 1911. The records of the burial boards passed to the Council along with their other assets; and while the minutes and other administrative records of the boards themselves cease in 1911, very often the books used in the cemeteries to record burials and fees paid continued in use unchanged after the transfer to City control. For these reasons, the records of the burial boards have been catalogued as part of the City records.

Parks

The 1875 Public Health Act enabled local authorities to purchase or take on lease land for 'pleasure grounds', and to provide funds for their upkeep. In 1879, Bath City Council took over the Royal Victoria Park under the Bath Act of that year. This park had been established by subscription in 1829; it formed part of the Freeman's Estate which the Council acquired by means of the 1879 Act. The Act provided that the park should be held in perpetuity as a park or place of public resort and recreation. In 1912, the Council also took over Sydney Gardens, which had been established as a 'pleasure garden' in 1795. In the twentieth century, the Council created or took over a number of other parks and recreational spaces.

Allotments

The Smallholdings and Allotments Act of 1908 placed on urban local authorities the duty to create allotments. The Council set up the Smallholdings and Allotments Committee that year, and purchased the first land for allotments at Rosehill above Larkhall in December. A number of further sites were rented or purchased from 1913 onwards, and by 1946 the Council were letting out over 2000 plots covering 140 acres. A number of allotment sites were closed over the next twenty years, and Bath & North East Somerset Council in 2015 had 23 allotment sites in Bath with just over 1100 plots.

Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council: records relating to Public Assistance, Children's Services, Social Services and Mental Health

Covering dates: c.1840-c.2000

Extent: 3 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Description

The records in this sub-fonds relate to the Council's responsibilities for welfare, and social and mental health services of various types.

Administrative History

Until 1930, 'Boards of Guardians', elected by ratepayers, were responsible for administering a wide range of 'poor relief'. People who were unable to support themselves through illness, disability, old age or unemployment could receive help, either in the workhouse or through 'outdoor relief' (payments in cash or in kind while they stayed in their own homes). The Guardians also had responsibility for children who were orphaned, or whose parents were unable to care for them. In 1930, all these responsibilities passed to local authorities; although renamed 'public assistance' rather than 'poor relief', the ways in which assistance was given remained the same, and the organisation and personnel generally continued unchanged. In Bath, the responsibilities of the Bath Board of Guardians for those within the city seeking assistance passed to Bath City Council.

Many of these 'public assistance' responsibilities were brought to an end by the various pieces of legislation which established the Welfare State in the period 1945-1948. Responsibility for medical care, unemployment, and benefits for many people in need passed to central government. Some responsibilities, however, remained with local authorities, often re-framed to take account of a totally different approach to the provision of welfare. In particular, local authorities remained responsible for the care and welfare of children 'deprived of a normal home life', of the elderly who needed residential care or support in their own homes rather than medical treatment, and of some disabled people.

Also included in this sub-fonds are records relating to asylums and the mentally ill. Bath City Council became responsible for the care of the mentally ill under an Act of 1845, which made local authorities responsible for providing care in 'mental asylums' for those who needed it. Although a little different from some of the public assistance records in the sub-fonds, they are closely related, and have been kept here for the convenience of users.

Content of the the Records

These records are not extensive: only a small amount of records relating to public assistance and welfare have been received by the Record Office, and they are patchy in nature. They include:

- records relating to the transfer of responsibilities from the Board of Guardians to the City Council
- a small number of records relating to applications for public assistance, pre-1945
- a small number of records of financial contributions by relatives
- a small number of records relating to children boarded out or in homes
- a small number of social services service development plans
- records relating to asylums and provision for the mentally ill

The records have not yet been catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing; please contact the Record Office for more information.

Bath City Council: records relating to civil defence

Covering dates: c.1935-c.1990

Extent: 16 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

Concerns about possible air attacks in any forthcoming war led the Home Office to set up an Air Raid Precautions Department in 1935, and to issue a circular to local authorities asking them to develop measures to protect the civilian population. In response to this circular, Bath City Council set up the Air Raid Precautions Committee in October 1935. In 1939 government circular 57/1939 instructed local authorities to appoint an ARP controller and to set up a small Emergency Committee to manage ARP organisation in war; this committee was to be given complete control over civil defence. Bath City Council set up an Emergency Committee consisting of three members in October 1939. The ARP Committee continued to exist, but with reduced powers, and was renamed the Civil Defence Committee in October 1941.

After the end of the Second World War, it took some time to wind down ARP activities and dispose of premises and equipment; and the ARP Controller continued in office, although on a part-time basis, and the Civil Defence Committee continued to exist. The Civil Defence Act of 1948 established the Civil Defence Corps, a civilian volunteer organisation trained and equipped to mobilise and take local control in the aftermath of a major national emergency. This Corps was organised by local authorities. It was disbanded on Home Office instructions 1968.

During the Second World War, several departments of the Council were involved with carrying out the work required for civil defence activities, the most important of which were the Town Clerk's Department, the Surveyor's Department, and the Medical Officer of Health's Department. The Civil Defence Department seems to have been set up to administer the Civil Defence Corps after the end of the War. The records in this sub-fonds therefore include records created by a number of departments of the Council; they have been collected together here as they all reflect the work carried out by the ARP/Civil Defence and Emergency Committees, and for the convenience of users.

Records relating to Bath City Council and Bath and North East Somerset Council officers and employees

Covering dates: c.1900-c.2002

Extent: 15 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

Although personnel management as a formal practice developed in the later twentieth-century, records recording the Council's relationship with its employees were created from a much earlier date.

Some of the records in this sub-fonds are strictly-speaking financial records, created by the Treasurer's Department. However, they have no long-term value as records of financial transactions; such detailed records are of limited value, and are summarised in other records which have been retained. These records merit preservation for the evidence they provide of the people who worked for the Council; the staff of the City Council are otherwise hard to trace.

Content of the the Records

The records include:

- records of salaries and pensions payments, including some weekly wages, 1909-1960s - these form the bulk of material in the sub-fonds
- series of filing: personnel training files 1960s-1970s; and personnel management policy files 1974-1984,
- staff handbooks, an equal opportunities booklet, an equalities policy booklet and a staff newsletter, all from the 1990s.
- Internal telephone directories 1980s-2002, guide to printing section services with staff pictures 1994,

The records have not yet been catalogued in detail. Cataloguing is continuing; for more information, contact the Record Office.

Bath City Council and Bath & North East Somerset Council: records of press, public relations and communications activities

Covering dates: c.1815-c.1993

Extent: 5 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Description

This sub-fonds includes a range of material created by various officers and departments of the Council from the early nineteenth to the late twentieth centuries, reflecting the Councils' need to communicate with the residents of Bath. While the means by which it has done this has varied over time, from posters and notices displayed in public places to full-colour magazines delivered to residents, all serve the purpose of conveying information in an appropriate medium.

Content of the the Records

The records include annual reports on the work of the Council, guides to facilities and services, posters, and volumes of press cuttings and advertisements placed in newspapers.

Related records

Guide books to Bath and its attractions, and leaflets produced by the Council for tourists, will be found in BC/13/9, while election posters are in BC/3/7.

Records of Bath City Freemen

Covering dates: 1590-1879

Extent: 6 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

The freemen or 'free citizens' of Bath were originally merchants who had the freedom to trade from shops and stalls within the city, to the exclusion of outsiders. It was possible to become a freeman by serving an apprenticeship of seven years to a freeman, or by purchase; local dignitaries and national figures were also elected as honorary freemen from time to time. In addition, until 1714 the mayor was also able to nominate freemen.

The number of freemen was not large - probably about a hundred in the sixteenth century, out of a total population of just over a thousand. From this small group, during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries a smaller nucleus of active members developed, and this small group gradually - and partly by default - gained control of the government of the city. In the charter given to the city in 1590, the group was officially styled the 'Bath Corporation', consisting of a mayor, aldermen and about 30 common councillors.

The freemen who were not members of the Corporation retained their privileges for the next century, but by the eighteenth century they no longer had a monopoly on trade. Their only asset was ownership of the Town Common, which was let out and produced a small income, shared between the freemen; it was managed by the Corporation on their behalf.

The 1835 Municipal Corporations Act abolished the right to be elected as a freeman, or to become a freeman by purchase, leaving the serving of an apprenticeship as the only route.

In 1879, the Bath Act brought to an end to what had by then become an anomalous situation. The Council in effect bought out the freemen: ownership of the Town Common passed to the Council, and in return the freemen living within the borough received £25 per year for the rest of their lives, as long as they continued to live within the borough. Those enrolled as apprentices before 31 July 1878 and who subsequently became freemen, would also receive the £25 annuity, again as long as they were resident. At the time the Act was passed, there were about 35 freemen resident in the City.

In 1885, The 'Honorary Freedom of Boroughs Act' re-instated the right of boroughs to admit as honorary freemen individuals of distinction or those who had rendered services to the borough. The award of this freedom conferred no tangible rights, and was purely a mark of appreciation.

In 1888, the final enrolment as a freeman through the route of apprenticeship took place. From this date, only Honorary Freemen have been created.

Records of Bath [Improvement] Commissions

Covering dates: c.1766-c.1851

Extent: c.5 linear metres

Level: Sub-fonds

Administrative History

During the eighteenth century, Bath grew from a small market and spa town into a fashionable resort for the aristocracy and gentry - the tenth largest city in England. As a result, the provision of amenities such as paved streets, street lighting, rubbish removal and watching (policing) became an important issue, both for the convenience of the inhabitants and to serve their high class visitors. However, the Corporation did not have powers to do this work or to raise money to fund it. In the first half of the century it obtained private Acts of Parliament to give it such powers, and also tried to devolve the duties onto parish authorities. Both approaches met with limited success, and the Corporation turned to the solution adopted by other cities: the setting up of Commissions for specific purposes and covering specific, small areas.

Commissions were set up by Acts of Parliament as follows:

'Bath Act' 1766 (6 Geo III c.70)

This Act, which created the 'Bath Commissioners', was sponsored by the Corporation. It provided for 20 Commissioners appointed jointly by the parishes and the Corporation (four from each parish, four from the Corporation), plus the Mayor and Justices of the Peace ex-officio. They were to be responsible for street cleaning, lighting and policing, widening streets and abolition of hanging shop signs. They contracted some services out, supervising the contractors. Their work was funded by rate paid by all householders in the city.

Bath Improvement Act 1789 (29 Geo III c.73)

This Act, which created the 'Improvement Commissioners', was again sponsored by the Corporation. It provided for 24 Commissioners, including 2 Bath MPs and owners of large estates. They were to be responsible for protecting the hot baths and springs, building Private Baths and a new Pump Room, and for a major city-centre renewal project involving the creation of five new streets and widening others.

Walcot Police Act 1793 (33 Geo III c. 89)

This Act, which created the 'Walcot Commissioners', was sponsored by the residents of Outer Walcot. The Commissioners were to be responsible for street paving, cleansing, refuse removal, lighting, policing, regulation of porters and sedan chairs and numbering houses. The Commissioners were empowered to serve as justices and were self-perpetuating.

Bathwick Police Act, 1801 (41 Geo III c.126)

This Act, similar to the Walcot Act, created Commissioners for Bathwick.

The functions of all the Commissioners were taken over by the Council under the Bath Act of 1851, under which the Council adopted the provisions of the Public Health Act of 1848 and became the Local Board of Health. The 1851 Act repealed all the Acts relating to Commissions, and provided that all the assets of the Commissioners, including their records, were to be passed to the Council. The Council appointed a committee (the '1851 Bath Act Committee') for executing the Act.
