Introduction

The church of St George, Beckington

From A Topographical Dictionary of England (vol 1) by Samuel Lewis (7th edition 1843):

BECKINGTON (ST. GREGORY), a parish in the union and hundred of FROME, e. division of SOMERSET. 3 miles (N.E.) from Frome; containing with the hamlet of Rudge, 1190 inhabitants. The manufacture of cloth was formerly extensively carried on, and still exists to limited degree. The living is a rectory, with that of Standerwick annexed, valued in the king's books at £19. 11.0½., and in the gift of Sainsbury: the tithes have been commuted for £464, and there are 72½ acres of glebe. The church contains the remains of Samuel Daniel, poet-laureate and historian, who died here in 1619; and of William Huish, rector of the parish, and one of the editors of the Polyglott Bible, who died in 1688. There are places of worship for Particular Baptists and Wesleyans. Thomas Beckington, Bishop of Bath and Wells, and a distinguished statesman, was born here in 1645.

(The 3rd edition of 1835 had the church as being dedicated to St George. A report in the Western Gazette on 1945 states that the church at Beckington is dedicated to St Gregory.)

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 21 Dec 1826 p4 col b:
For the theatre at Bath late in the reign of Elizabeth, or early in that of James I, SAMUEL DANIEL wrote his Tragedy of Philotas, which gained so unfortunate a celebrity. Daniel we may claim as one of our own poets, for he was born in this neighbourhood, spent most of his life in rural retirement in this part of the kingdom; and he lies buried in the church of Beckington, where his bust may be seen, a part of the monument erected to his memory by that Countess of Dorset, Pembroke, and Montgomery, who raised monuments to Drayton and Spenser: Daniel, whom a great critic of the present day calls 'one of the golden writers of our golden Elizabethan age,' and who further says of him that his diction and his sentiments bear no marks of age; . . .

(Certain small poems lately printed with the tragedie of Philotas. Written by Samuel Daniel. Daniel, Samuel, 1562-1619. At London: Printed by G. Eld for Simon Waterson [and Edward Blount], 1605. According to the Dictionary of National Biography 1885-1900 vol 14, Daniel had a farm called 'Ridge' near Beckington from about 1603, having moved from London where he had often been at court.)

A notice in the Bath Chronicle of Thu 4 Mar 1836 lists patients that had been discharged, cured or relieved at Bath Hospital and includes 'Ruth Timbury, Beckington, leper, cleansed'.

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 9 Dec 1858 p5 col e:
An Order in Council has been issued for the discontinuance of burials in the churchyard of Beckington, Somerset.

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 7 Jul 1836 p3 col d:
An organ is about to be erected in the parish church of Beckington, near Frome, the estimated expence of which will be £120, and it is with pleasure we state that, through the perseverance of Messrs. Hale & Hudden, the churchwardens, upwards of £90 are already subscribed towards defraying the expence.

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 7 Jul 1836 p3 col d:
James Bourne and William Long, old offenders, were committed for trial, charged with having, on the 2d of January inst., stolen nine pounds and a half weight of copper, affixed to Beckington Church.

From the Frome Times of Wed 17 Aug 1859 p4 col c:
It was our duty, as well as pleasure, to notice a few weeks since, a beautiful Lettern manufactured by our neighbour, Mr. Singer. We are now given to understand, that this beautiful specimen of workmanship has been placed in Beckington Church, and is the gift of a lady in this neighbourhood.

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 25 May 1871 p3 col d:
A rope maker of Beckington, near Frome, named Whitlock, hung himself last week. He was an habitual drunkard, and the coroner's jury on Monday returned a verdict of "Temporary insanity, caused by excessive drinking." The Coroner (Dr. Wybrants) said that the verdict was really one of felo de se, and ordered that the body should be interred between the hours of 10 and 12 at night in the parish churchyard.

(No corresponding burial record has been found but there is one for Eliza Whitlock, aged 56, buried on 30 Apr 1871. In the 1871 census at Bath Road, Beckington: Thomas Whitlock, aged 57, rope & twine manufacturer, wife Eliza, aged 57, four children, and a grandson. The death of Thomas Whitlock, aged 57, was registered 1871/Q2 Frome.)

From the Frome Times of Wed 18 Feb 1873 p2 col f:
We have much pleasure in noticing the fact that a bazaar in aid of the fund for discharging the debt incurred in the restoration of Beckington Church, is to be held during the ensuing summer at Standerwick Court. The bazaar will be under most distinguished patronage. The announcement is made by a printed circular which also says “the total cost of entire restoration is computed at about £2500; of this sum above £1000 is still wanting. Subscriptions are much needed, and contributions of all kinds for the bazaar will be thankfully received by the Lady Emilie Gray, Standerwick Court, near Frome, and by Miss Langford Sainsbury, Beckington Rectory, near Bath.

From the Frome Times of Wed 18 Jun 1873 p2 col f:
RE-OPENING OF BECKINGTON CHURCH

On Thursday the above Church, after thorough restoration of the interior and a partial restoration of the exterior, was opened for public worship. The services have been for some time past held in the parish school under considerable disadvantages, and the residents of Beckington will gladly hail the completion of the restoration. The work was entrusted to Messrs. Brown the well-known builders of Frome, and it is but just to say of these gentlemen that they have fulfilled their contract in a highly creditable manner. The hole of the plastering of the walls in the church have been removed and the stonework pointed. Two beautiful stained glass windows have been placed in the church. The west window (“Incident in the nativity of our Saviour”), and excellent piece of workmanship, executed by Mr. Horwood, of Frome, was presented by Admiral Edgell in remembrance of Mary Edgell, of Standerwick. A small coloured glass window on the north side of the chancel is a gift of the Rector, Mr. Horwood, of Frome, having carried out this work. The subject of the design of the Evangelists with their emblems. The whole of the old windows in the church have been completely renovated and new mullions have been added to the larger ones, and the whole have been filled with cathedral glass. The smaller ones have been much improved, and the ventilation of the entire building is now, as a matter of consequence, perfect. The ceiling of the nave has been removed and a splendid oak roof is now shown. The south side aisle has been similarly treated; in the north aisle the old roof has been removed and a new one inserted to correspond with the others. The roof of the Vestry has also been laid open in the same way. The roof of the chancel has been panelled and stencilled, Mr. Fricker, of Beckington, was entrusted with this portion of the restoration, and has displayed a large amount of skill in the execution of the work. A new pupil of Bath stone is a decided ornament to this church, and displays some excellent workmanship. The reredos, which is likewise entirely new, is the gift of the Rector, and is executed by Earp, Kennington, London. The arches of the reredos are in alabaster. Supported by short marble pillars. The marble cross in the centre arch is upon a ground of mosaic, and the back ground in the other arches is of a similar material. The beautiful altar cloth was presented by the Lady Emily Grey. New lamps for the chancel—supplied by Mr. Singer, of Frome—were presented by another lady. The tomb of the Lord and Lady Seymour, in the chancel, has been subject to a thorough cleansing. There are also new music desks to the choir stalls, and a new Litany stool. The tower arch, which has been for years blocked up, is now thrown open, while the large organ loft by which it was fronted has been removed. The groined ceiling of the arch has been thoroughly cleansed. The church has been completely repaved with concrete, but the chief improvement is the removal of the old pews, and the substitution of new stalls of a convenient description. An elaborately carved coat of arms, dated 1574, fixed over the South door, has been cleansed and renovated; the other monuments in the interior have also been thoroughly cleansed. There are also entirely new doors at the North, South, and Western entrances; also a new priest’s door into the Vestry. The organ has been entirely rebuilt and enlarged under the superintendence of Mr. H. J. Prosser, of Road, and the work has given complete satisfaction. The tone of the instrument is now all that can be desired. . . . The front show pipes have been decorated in a most effective manner by Messrs. Grant, Bros., of Frome and Chapmanslade. The exterior of the church has also undergone general restoration. The tileing (sic) has been removed and replaced. New coping has also been used, and new stone crosses now ornament the ends of the roofing. The decorations of the interior of the church on Thursday were most tastily carried out by the Rector, and members of his family. At the four roads leading to the church-yard, large arches of evergreen and flowers were erected by Mr. Pople, builder, of Beckington, and were the subject of much admiration. . . .

A history of Beckington Castle and the origins of the name of the village were described in the Bath Chronicle of Thu 6 Aug 1874 p7.

The Bath Chronicle of Thu 19 Jun 1875 p3 col e also carried a report of 'the church of St. Gregory at Beckington'. The National Gazetteer of Great Britain and Ireland of 1868 also refers to the church as being dedicated to St Gregory.

A visit a couple of years later by the Somerset Archæological Society was not flattering about the renovation with a Mr King, of Crediton, remarking "The inside of Beckington Church has been stripped of plaster, and the first impression conveyed was that it had been turned inside out; and that was not worthy of imitation." (Bath Chronicle Thu 19 Aug 1975 pp2-3).

From the Western Daily Press of Fri 18 May 1906 p5:

The announcement that the ancient and interesting old Norman tower of Beckington Church is to be thoroughly restored will be read with interest. According to the 'Bath Chronicle' the tower dates from the eleventh century. It originally stood in a central position between the nave and the chancel, but when the church was re-built in the Perpendicular period western towers were the fashion, so the church was rebuilt to the east of the tower. In 1768 the south and west walls of the belfry were taken down and re-built in a very unsatisfactory manner. It is proposed to restore these two walls to correspond with the east and north walls. The turret also has separated from the tower, and its stone roof is very dilapidated. Three of the six bells are cracked, and all the bell-framing and fittings must be new. . . . They purpose (sic) having a full peal of eight bells, instead of six at present, and if funds allow, to have a chiming apparatus attached as well. The ancient Norman face of the tower is to be disturbed as little as possible, and the work is to be done from the inside. The committee hope to get the whole work completed during the summer.

The Taunton Courier of Wed 5 Aug 1925 p10 had under 'Notes and Queries' (882) a historical report from the Western Flying Post of 5 Mar 1764 stating the "We have advice from Beckington, near Frome, in Somersetshire, that their parish church sunk two feet last Saturday se'nnight, supposed to be occasioned by the late rains."

The parish of Beckington is now part of a benefice which includes: Berkley, Rodden, Lullington and Orchardleigh. The Beckington village website has a section on genealogy with transcripts of birth, marriage and burial registers as well as a list of names from 13 memorials in the churchyard. The memorials in the village's Baptist burial ground are more extensive.

There were peaks in deaths in 1742, 1760 and 1769. In 1760, 31 of the 52 burials were for children and there were 11 burials of children in December of that year.

In the mid to late 1700s the burial register entries mainly omit the forenames of children and wives referring to them as 'child of' and 'wife of'.

A new edition of the Book of Common Prayer had been published in 1772 by the Oxford University Press. Unbound, it cost 10 shillings. The start of the volume has the text of the laws for 'the uniformity of Common Prayer, and Service in the Church and Administration of the Sacraments' The (third) Act of Uniformity of 1558 (following acts in 1549 and 1552) defined the order of prayer set out in the Book of Common Prayer as well as introducing a fine of 12 pence for anyone who did not go to [an Anglican] church once a week. Various clauses were repealed in 1650 under the Commonwealth, reinstated by the Restoration of 1660, and most of the Act finally repealed in 1888.

An old map shows the original extent of the graveyard before it was extended southwards.

A document on the internal memorials has also been produced by the National Association of Decorative and Fine Arts Societies (NADFAS), now known as 'The Arts Society'. This includes descriptions of some brass memorials no longer in the church but which are elsewhere for safekeeping. The source is Monumental Brasses in Somerset by Arthur Bentley Connor which, in turn, is based on a series of papers that he wrote on this subject which appeared in the Proceedings of the Somerset Archaeological and Natural History Society from 1931 to 1953.

			 The British Numismatic Journal has the following obituary in vol 24 (1941-44) on p57: MR. V. B. CROWTHER-BEYNON MR. VERNON BRYAN CROWTHER-BEYNON, who died on 8 April 1941 in his seventy-sixth year, was one of the best-known members of the Society. He was a well-known antiquary and a member of numerous antiquarian and archaeological societies, in most of which he had held office. Born at Beckenham, Kent, of which his father was Rector, he was educated at Wellington and Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he was M.A., and called to the Bar. Crowther-Beynon lived for many years in Rutland, on the antiquities of which he was an authority and wrote several papers. He also acted as local secretary to the Society of Antiquaries for Rutland. Later he moved to Beckenham, the proximity of which to London enabled him to take a more active part in the antiquarian world. He had many interests and collections, but the bypaths of numismatics interested him most. Crowther-Beynon was an authority on the neglected field of coin-weights, to which he devoted special attention. He served for many years on the Council of the British and Royal Numismatic Societies: of the former he was President from 1933 to 1937, and of the latter Vice-President. He had also served on the Council of the Society of Antiquaries, of which he had been a Fellow since 1905. Some years ago he went to live near Bath, to the great loss of many societies in London. His knowledge was wide and varied, but he wrote comparatively little. To the British Numismatic Journal he contributed, between 1926 and 1930, three short papers on "A Collection of Money-scales and other Coinweighing Appliances", "An Eighteenth Century Coin-clipper", and "Peny-yard Pence". He was a frequent and interesting exhibitor at the meetings of the Society. In the Great War he took an active part in relief work, and his services as honorary

		beneath his ears. His armour consists of collar of mail, breast-plate to which is strapped an additional defence, the buckle visible above the gauntlets. These have long peaked cuffs and no divisions for the fingers, which are guarded by overlapping plates. The pauldrons, or shoulder-pieces, are similar in size and have projecting ridges to guard the neck. The elbow pieces are large. The skirt of taces ends in a mail fringe with indented ridges, over which two tuiles are riveted. The genouillières have plates behind them. The sollerets are long, and pointed and have unguarded rowel spurs. The sword is suspended diagonally across the body from a plain narrow belt, while the misericorde is attached to the taces on the R hip. The feet rest upon a greyhound, whose collar is ornamented with quatrefoils. Elizabeth Seyntmaur née Choke, and later Biconyll. She faces towards Sir John, to display her butterfly head-dress. She wears a long close-fitting gown, cut very low and edged with fur round the shoulders and below the breasts, which are partly covered by an undergown, partly by some transparent material. The sleeves are tight, broadening into mittens which cover the backs and palms of the hands. From a chain around her neck hangs a pendant in the form of a rose. Both the figures laid in the chancel are replicas. Originally the brass would have had the inscription at the base of the figures, and would have been surrounded by several shields. Today the figure of Sir John is lost, having been stolen in 2008, and that of Lady Elizabeth is kept safely elsewhere. The inscription is now set into the chancel step, and the only remaining shield is fixed to the E wall of the S aisle In 2008 it was discovered that the figure of Sir John had been prised from the floor and stolen. Elizabeth, although half prised had been left. It was decided that a replica of both the figures should be made, and that is what is now laid. The original figure of Elizabeth is kept safely elsewhere, it is much worn, and the replica is less deeply incised than the original would have been; the plate shown (from Connor) is more defined than the replica. The inscription is original and so too is the one shield remaining. There would probably have been at least three more - those of Seyntmaur, top L; Brooke top R, and another, in addition to the remaining shield of the Lovel family. In a letter written in 1844 to Jerome Braikenridge, WW Wheatley, the artist says that the inscription was found among rubbish, and was fixed by the Rector, Mr Sainsbury on to the stone monument in the chancel (presumably that of the Erleighs), and then later removed to the altar steps, but not reunited with the brass. Dressed in a kirtle with stiffly pleated skirt, and a sleeveless cote-hardie with plain border and band of rectangular ornaments down the front. Over the cote-hardie is a jacket fastened by cords with decorated studs. Her head is covered by a square nebulé head-dress with deep decorated border, underneath which is a cap embroidered with quatrefoil flowers. The feet are missing below the skirt indicating that the effigy had perhaps been damaged in a move, and may at one time have been on a table-top tomb. There has been some restoration. Fryer says the clothes are those of a widow. Fryer says the clothes are those of a widow (Alfred C Fryer: Monumental effigies in Somerset SANHS LXV 191)

His remains are deposited in the vault beneath. Also to the Memory of JANE, the beloved wife of Robert Perks, of Monkton Combe in this county, and the youngest daughter of the above James Carpenter, who departed this life, in the certain hope of a blessed immortality. Two effigies, each carved from a single block of great oolite, see 005 above, lie on a narrow plinth with Sir John's head resting on a pillow. Lady Margaret lies against the wall with two small dogs, collars round their necks, at the bottom of her skirt. At each side of her head are small angels, or statues of a child with arms outstretched, bareheaded, and wings closed on their backs holding two cushions, the lower one rectangular and upper one set diagonally. She is wearing a pleated gown under a long mantle fastened with tasselled cords. Covering her head is a barbe, or pleated cap enclosing her hair, neck and throat. She lies with her hands in prayer. There is damage to her face, and there may be some missing parts at the feet. Sir John is dressed in 14th C armour of simple plate, open pointed bascinet and camail hauberk (chain mail) carved in relief to protect the throat, and extending to the hips where it shows below the jupon. The jupon reaches from shoulders to midway between hips and knees. A close-fitting garment scalloped at the skirt and carved in decorative relief. Over the jupon a 3 cm wide baldrick encircles the hips, consisting of a series of linked, raised ornamental rectangles carved in relief, and fastened with a buckle and pendant strap. Attached to the baldrick on his R side is his dagger of rondel type hilt and broken scabbard, and on the L side hangs his scabbard with sword having metal tag and hilt and knuckle guard. These are both anachronistic 19th C restorations. Articulated body armour follows the curves of the body:- he wears at the shoulder two-pieced brassards, elbow cops having protecting plates each with two rivets attached to arm-plates or vambraces above and below, thigh pieces, riveted to knee-cops, above, and below to shinguards which cover the sollarrets, or foot armour. These are articulated with five pieces, pointed and have spurs. His hands are covered with short gauntlets and are clasped in prayer. The feet rest on a lion, its

011	John Compton (-1505)  Edyth Compton		 From the NADFAS description:                      On the brass plate, two separate figures with rebus on either side, inscription below in black-lettering mostly l/c and below this small figures of their 5 sons. He wears a long fur-lined gown over his doublet, which shows at the neck and wrists and is held by a girdle ornamented with quatrefoils. Broad-toed shoes rest on grass with a flower between his feet. The sons are dressed like their father, but with plain gowns. Edyth's gown trails to the ground in generous folds; loose fitting at the top open at the neck to show a pleated partlet. It is edged with fur and has large cuffs, A girdle is buckled loosely round the hips, ornamented with a wavy pattern, and ends in a metal tag. She wears long and elaborate kennel headdress, with plain lappets; the brass was cross-hatched to hold some colour now lost, her eyes are downcast. All the figures are in prayer. The rebus on each side has a barrel - or tun - with the letters 'J.Cum' on it in an appropriate allusion to his name. Each is held by a different angel.

		His merchant's mark is fixed to the S aisle, SW wall of the vestry, having been separated from the original. It is in the form of a gridiron, with the handle in the form of a cross, and two pennons between the initials. The plate is from AB Connor's book 'Monumental Brasses of Somerset' published by SANHS. It shows the complete set, recorded in 1932. Connor remarks that the 'C' in the date and the 'E' of Edyth are unusual, if not unique. The brass in the vestry is a facsimile in brass, not very deeply incised, and is of John, his wife and the children with one facsimile rebus only. The originals are kept safely elsewhere, except for one rebus still in place on the floor. The original of Edyth is in two pieces - see Ph, and the merchant's mark is still the original. Connor states that in 1932 the inscription showed signs of paint, which he believed was added in recent times. That is not now evident.

It is remarkable that Dr. Eyre's father and grandfather were both, as well as himself, canons of Wells and Salisbury, and, like him, were highly esteemed in both dioceses; the late Chief Justice Eyre was his elder brother. Of Dr. Eyre himself, whether considered as an enlightened and liberal Christian, a respected dignitary of the Church of England, or a polished gentleman, truly beloved in every relation of private life, too high a character cannot be given. From his many years of residence in the strict discharge of his clerical duties, his worth was well known, and his loss will be long and sincerely regretted.                         PROB 11/1533/59 Will of Reverend Thomas Eyre, Doctor in Divinity of Wells, Somerset, date: 5 May 1812.
