Introduction

This document contains transcriptions of inscriptions on memorials at Charlcombe near Bath.

These transcriptions come from surveys carried out in 2012 and 2015 supplemented by a checking of some inscriptions and photographing of internal memorials in 2016. The names from the memorials have been reconciled with entries in the burial registers and other sources to give, as far as possible, the years of birth and death of the individuals mentioned on the memorials and an index to these.

Overall Layout

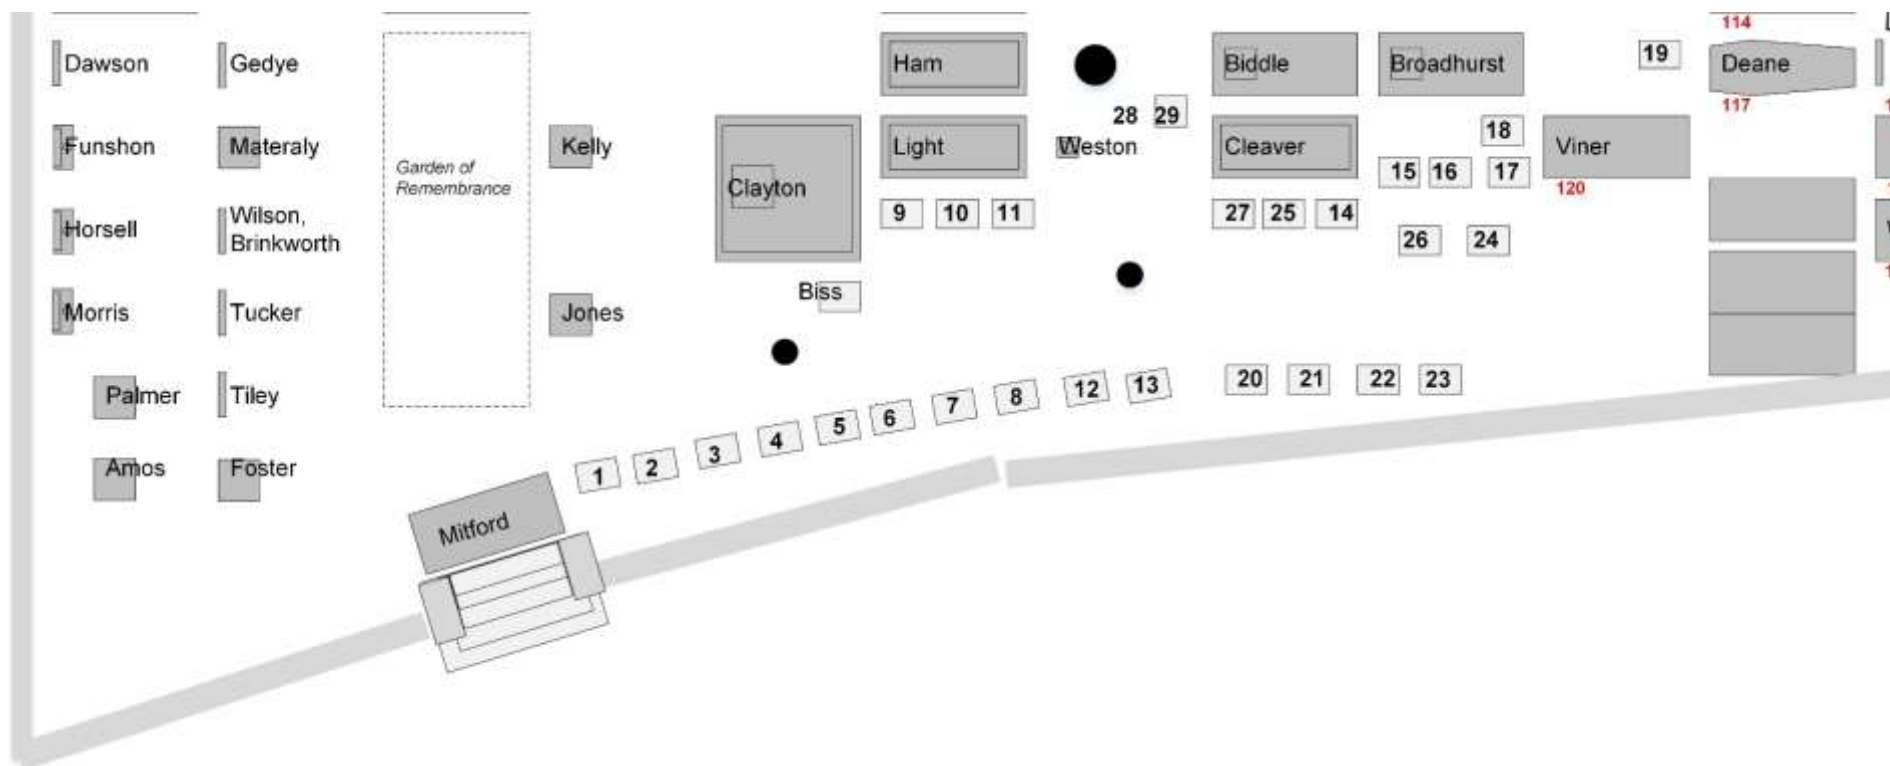

Numbering Schemes

There is a map dated 1901 at Bath Record Office in which the plots and surviving memorials have been numbered. Numbers 1-78 are given to the plots in the new section with 79-185 for the surviving memorials in the old section. A later numbering scheme has been applied to the new section in which the almost rectangular arrangement of plots have been given row letters A-J and plot numbers within each row, with the numbers starting at 1 on the northern side. In addition there are individually numbered plots for ashes. A 'Garden of Remembrance' occurs in row C of the new section, occupying the space of five graves. In some of the documentation burials in this area have been given numbers but, in general, the entry on the burial register simply notes that the ashes are in this garden. A handwritten annotation of the later map has it that Row D plots 9-10 are for the interment of ashes.

In the documentation the following is used:

- A.x plots for the burial of ashes
- N.<row>.<plot> for the graves in the new section
- O.x memorials in the old section

Section N

This is the 'new' section of the graveyard. It appears on the map of 1901 laid out in a grid pattern.

The section is arranged in ten rows (A-J) with A at the western side. Within each row the numbers start at 1 at the upper, northern side.

Row J is part of the 'old' section and the numbering scheme that appears in the 1901 map has been retained (see Section O).

			Bastions: The Central European Tragedy published in 1939, prior to the outbreak of war. Those favouring appeasement of Germany attempted unsuccessfully to have various passages removed, which led to him to resign from the Daily Telegraph. The death of Alice Gedye, born on 16 Sep 1910, was registered 2005/May Bath & NE Somerset. There was an extensive obituary in the Daily Telegraph of 3 Sep 2005 which includes: “Litzi Gedye, who has died aged 94, was one of a small band of native German-speaking agents working in Turkey and the Levant for the Special Operations Executive during the Second World War. The daughter of a prosperous Jewish Viennese businessman, she was to marry, in 1947, Eric Gedye, Central European correspondent for The Daily Telegraph, whose secretary she became in Vienna in 1935. When he was sent to Moscow for the New York Times the following year, she went as his “assistant”, keeping a well-ordered catalogue of his reports, and sometimes also filing copy when he was busy with other work. ... Gedye spent his last years working for Radio Free Europe, and she was distraught when he decided to retire to Bath, a provincial city in a country she had never visited. Yet it was Gedye who found it difficult to settle. He was ill at ease, bored and missing his friends. But Litzi made the most of her new life, teaching German to the girls of Bath High School and listening to their teenage problems. Before their son Robin went to Clifton College, she prepared him for the “ordeal” by giving him boxing lessons, for which they gloved up to spar in the corner of their living room. Litzi Gedye lived her life through her husband and, after his death in 1971, through their son Robin, the Telegraph’s correspondent in Germany from 1989 to 1996, who worked for the paper until earlier this year.”
