			“According to a letter in the possession of the Board of Deputies of British Jews in London, written by Mr J Bunford Samuel on 21 September 1908, Mr Samuel noticed on the cemetery wall a stone tablet with the name of his father’s relative, Samuel Samuel, and of Baron Rothschild, who no doubt had an interest in the cemetery. In a letter, dated 17 February 1911, Mr Samuel stated that the cemetery was founded by the great-grandfather and one of the Rothschilds. ... Though it is thought that the Rothschilds funded the purchase of the cemetery extension, the Jewish Chronicle of 1862 reported the purchase but there is no mention of Samuel or Rothschild.”

Eva Jablonski (1879-1917)

The Bath Chronicle of Sat 18 Aug 1917 p7 reported on the inquest into the death of Eva Jablonski and the burial of her body in the Jewish Burial Ground at Bath. The inquest established that she was a Russian subject that she posed as being French but her husband was in Germany. She had been giving French lessons, had stayed at the Carlton Hotel in Bath before moving to a boarding house in Laura Place.

“Maria Mandel, 43, of Southside, Plymouth, wife of a Russian Pole, said deceased was adopted by her father and mother, and treated like a sister by witness. Deceased was born near Łódz in Russian Poland, now occupied by the Germans. She was about 37 years of age, and married. Whether her husband was alive or not witness did not know. She came to England when war broke out. Witness had lived in England some years. She told witness she came to England from Vichy. Her husband was in Germany. ... Last Whitsuntide was the first time witness saw her sister in England, She stayed with her at Bude. She then said she was going to Bath for the cure, and suggested the witness should come to Bath with her. Witness stayed with her for eleven days. She suffered from nerves. A week ago witness had a letter from her sister from Bath saying she was going to Eastbourne as she felt very lonely here. She told witness to write in English.

Witness’s brother-in-law explained that this request was made so that the letter might not be interrupted by censoring. His sister-in-law generally wrote in the Hebrew characters of the Russian Pole.”

The Hull Daily Mail of Tue 14 Aug 1917 p3 carried a report of the inquest and also that she had visited Harrogate in 1916 in the company of an old gentleman, said to be her grandfather. She had stayed at a boarding house “where her vivacious temperament had made her somewhat popular amongst the other guests.”

Shortly before her death, the police had been making enquiries into her true nationality. Having given a false statement to the police she went to the police station and gave another account in which she said that she was married with twin children, a boy and a girl and that she had a sister in Plymouth.

MME. JABLONCKI BURIED SIMPLE FUNERAL RITES AT COMBE DOWN

Eva Jablonski, the Polish lady whose tragic death formed the subject of an inquest on Monday was buried Tuesday afternoon in the Jewish Cemetery at Greendown Place, Combe Down. Only three near relatives attended, and the last rites were conducted with the utmost simplicity. In accordance with Jewish usage, the coffin was of the plainest description, without even a breastplate, and there were no flowers. The service, partly in Hebrew and partly in English was conducted by a Rabbi from Bristol. The mourners themselves, all with covered heads, assisted in the last rites, placing the first spadefuls of soil in the grave. The Jewish community in Bath was represented by Mr. R. Somers.

Mr. A. E. Tanner, of 6, Monmouth Street, carried out the funeral arrangements.
