Introduction

The church of St Martin, Northstoke

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 17-Jan-1856 p3: "Yesterday, a man, named Isaac Hicks, was charged at the County Magistrates' Office with breaking into the church at Northstoke, and stealing a prayer-book, a candlestick, the cloth of the communion table, and a hood, the property of the Rev. Henry Morduant Fletcher and the parishioners."

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 25-Nov-1858 p8: "Numerous alterations in the districts of the various Courts in England and Wales will be made on and after the 1st of Jan., 1859. Her Majesty has been pleased, by Order in Council, to direct that, from that period, the parishes of Kelston and Northstoke now in the district of the County of Gloucestershire, holden at Bristol, . . . shall be in the district of the County Court of Somersetshire, holden at Bath; . . ."

In December 1863 there was a public meeting convened at the Guildhall, Bath in opposition to church rates. For Northstoke £10 7s. 6d. had been collected in church rates but only 18s. had been spent on the church (Bath Chronicle Thu 3-Dec-1863 p8).

From The Bath Weekly Chronicle and Herald of Sat 24 Jul-1937 p10 entitled 'A Stroll to North Stoke': "To enter the church you have to climb up three flights of stone steps. . . I found from a book dealing with researches, that a farm house immediately below the church had, until 1838, a very fine monastic barn, the estate being, previous to the Reformation, the property of Bath Abbey. The house is built on the ruins of what must have been a large Roman villa. Many architectural fragments have been found of exceptionally elegant characters. The church was probably built on a portion of those ruins, a Roman tile having been discovered in the walls. The porch has an ancient sun-dial; a few similar examples exist elsewhere, notably one in the same position at Newton St. Loe. The western tower, which took the place of a Norman predecessor, was erected in 1731. The nave apparently dates from the time of Archbishop Laud, although the timber roof is about the date of Henry VII. An arch dividing the nave from the chancel is of a very early type, rudely pointed and is built obliquely to the north-east. The steps of the rood loft and the doorway were discovered during a restoration under the supervision of the late Major Davis."

Rambles About Bath by R E Peach (6th edition 1876) p248 is rather unflattering: "Northstoke is a straggling village of antique farm-houses, picturesque in the highest degree. The Church, of Norman foundation, is situated on a gentle eminence, and is remarkable for its utter want of beauty. A heavy square nondescript tower, having "William Britton, churchwarden, 1731," legibly engraven thereon, seems to have been built after his own design; it is thirty feet high."

The church's tower from the west.

From Primitive Sun Dials or Scratch Dials - Containing a list of those in Somerset by Dom Ethelbert Horne (1858-1952), (The Wessex Press, Taunton 1917) p52:

NORTH STOKE CHURCH

65. This dial is on the E. Buttress of the S. porch It is 5 feet 5 inches above the ground, the noonline is 4½ inches in length, the stylehole was original 1¼ inches deep, and the aspect is S. by 20° W. Tpe 3. September 11h, 1911.

This dial is described at some length in the Proc. Som. Arch. Soc. XXXIV, pp. 50 and 127. The writer calls it "Saxon", but although the porch is evidently of great age, it is later than Norman, nor is the dial divided according to the Saxon method. There are many more dials of the same type in the county, and as they are frequently on late Perpendicular work (see Wellow, No. 26) they are not older than that period. The stylehole of this dial is badly injured, but enough remains to show its original shape.

A Type 3 is defined as: The stylehole made in a stone, with lines radiating from it downwards only.

The register from 1989 is at All Saints, Weston.

Some memorials in the churchyard do not have corresponding entries in the burial register.

Memorial Inscriptions

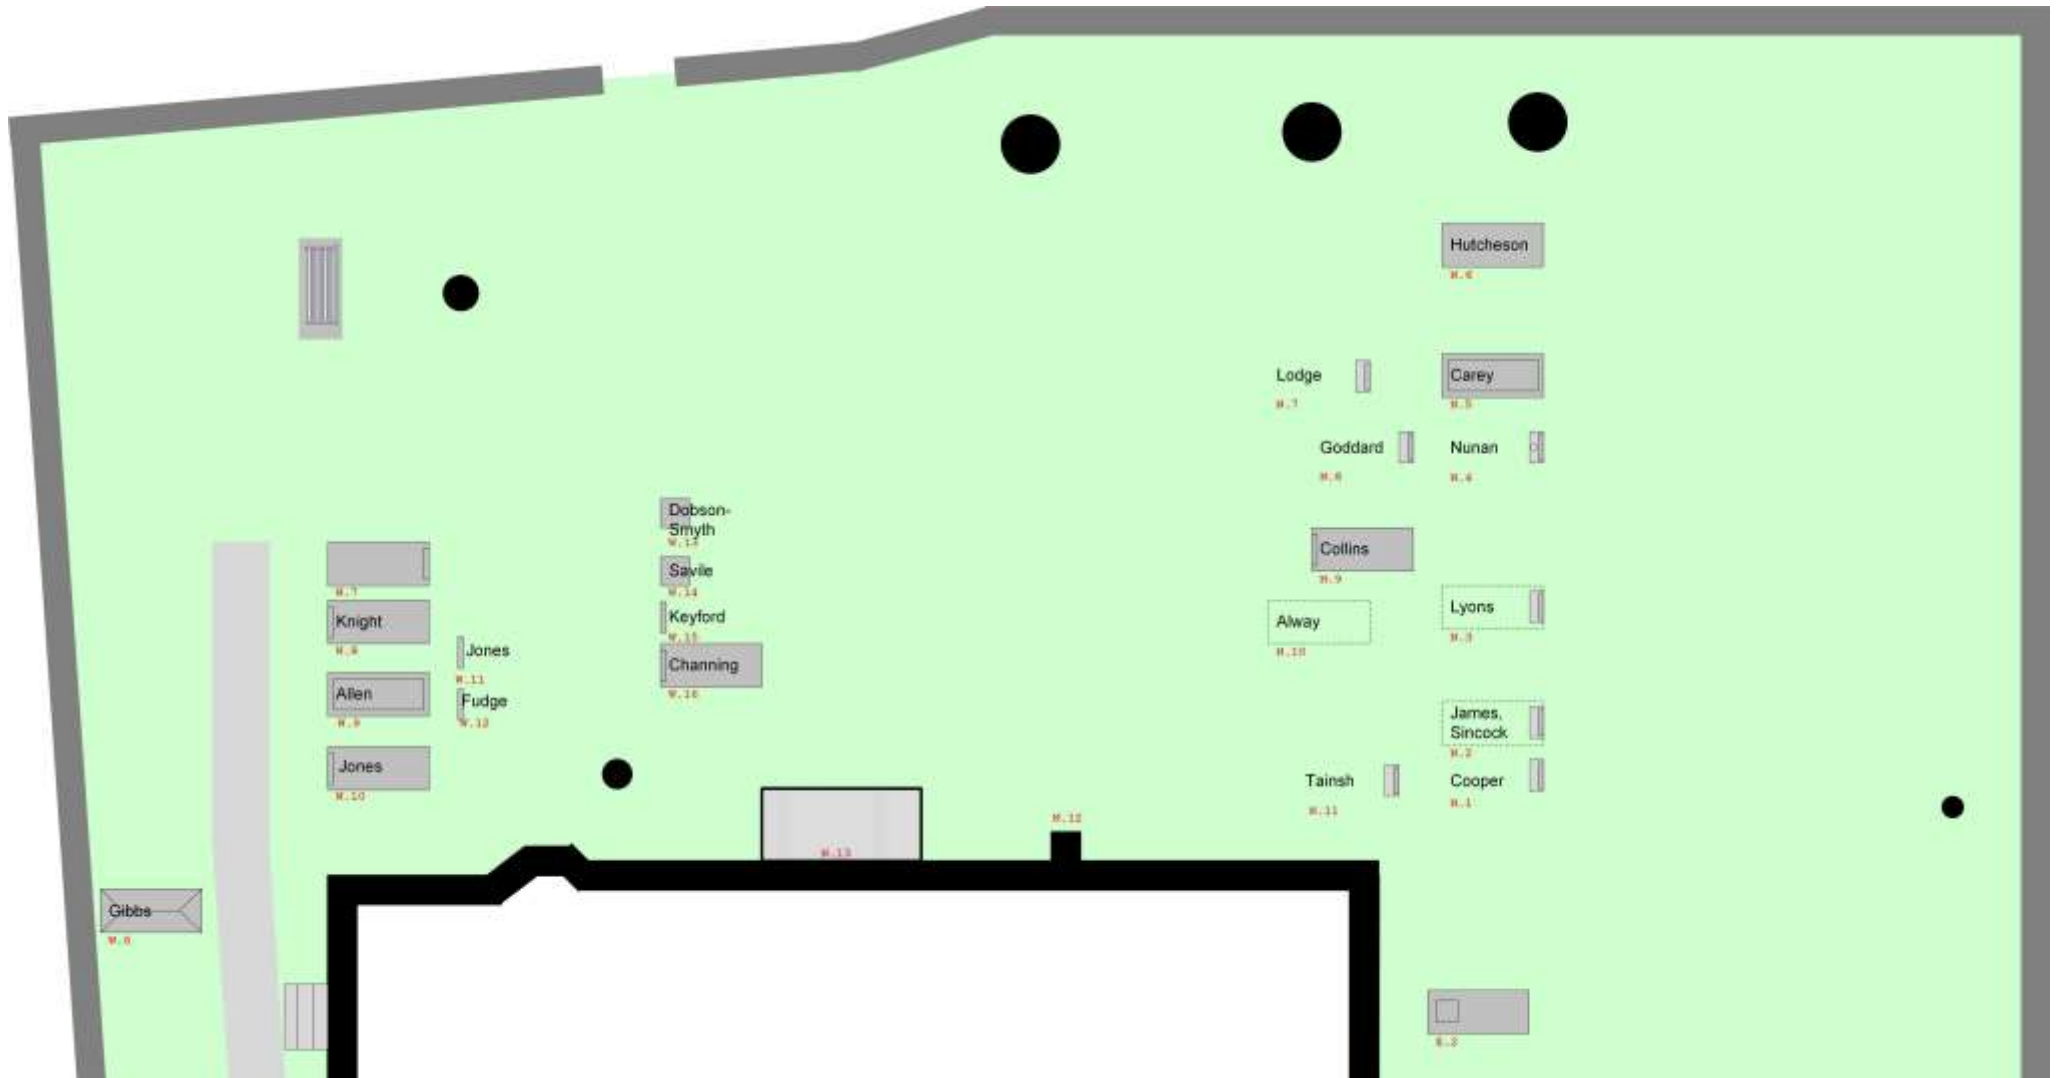

Some memorial inscriptions in the church appear in The History and Antiquities of the County of Somerset by Rev. John Collinson (1791) and The Church Rambler (1878). In addition, there is a handwritten set of transcriptions which date from 1884 and from a visit by the Bath Heraldic Society in 1976. I am grateful to Michael Messer for providing a copy of these.

X.3	Joseph Wilton (-1808)	North: Joseph Wilton 1808 This hour perhaps our friend is well The next we hear his passing bell We only leave a of pain With help in heaven to meet again	The 1884 survey notes "The top of this tomb is covered with illegible inscriptions."
X.4	Richard Davis (1706-1788) Eleanor Davis (1722-1797) Martha Davis (1757-1773) Jane Davis Robert Davis (1761-1818) Martha Davis (1768-1839) William Davis (1805-1837)	Beneath Lieth the body of Richard Davis of this parish Who died 29 th of August 1788 Aged 72 Years Also Elinor his wife Who died 1707 Aged 75 Years Also Martha their daughter Who died in the years 1773 Aged 15 years Also Jane their daughter Who died in her infancy Also Robert son of the above Who died Nov 11 1818 Aged 56 Years Likewise Martha his wife Who died March 28 th 1839 Aged 70 Years Also William son of the said	The 1884 survey has the year of death of Elinor Davis as 1707. However, the burial register entry would suggest that 1797 would be more appropriate. The burial register has the burial of Jane Davis, infant, on 27 Aug 1765. For the last name on the inscription - William Davis - the burial register has the burial of William Davis aged 32 of North Stoke on 31 Aug 1837.
