The first manager of KDHP Company was HM Knight. A description of Munnar at 1UpIndia.com includes: "Protestant Church: It was built in 1911. The hillside cemetery above it was established long before the church itself. The first person to be buried there was Mrs Eleanor Knight, aged 24, who came to Munnar from Sri Lanka in 1894. It was her last wish to be buried here." From Kerala.in in its description of Munnar's Church of South India church: The church cemetery here was established in 1899, before the church formed and the first one to be buried in the cemetery was Eleanor Knight, the wife of Henry Knight one of the General Managers of Kannan Devan Company. From Indianexpress.com: Munnar's British cemetery has an interesting, though tragic, origin. Visiting the hill station as a young bride in 1894, Eleanor Knight was so bewitched by its scenic beauty that she told her planter-husband, "When I die, I'd like to be buried there." Tragically enough, three days later cholera claimed her. Her grief-stricken spouse honoured her wish, burying her at the very spot where they had stood. Parks and Gardens UK has a description of Beech Hurst, Haywards Heath, West Sussex, England (Record Id: 6767) which includes: “While it is not known exactly when the house was built, its first owner was the Reverend Horatio Hickey and he and his family were in residence in the early-1860s. Later residents included a Reverend John Milner, who lived there during the 1870s. Robert Burnside, a school teacher, occupied Beech Hurst in the 1880s until he became bankrupt in 1887. Alfred Densham resided there in the 1890s and early-1900s. By 1915 the owner was Henry Mansfield Knight. In World War 1, Beech Hurst became a military convalescent home for Haywards Heath Hospital, which stood just opposite the house's main entrance. In 1920 William Johnston Yapp purchased Beech Hurst from Henry Knight for £10,500.” The gardens are now a leisure park having been bequeathed to the people of Haywards Heath by William Yapp.

The Clewer in question is near Windsor where he was a rector from 1844. There were over 40 branches in Britain and abroad. The sisterhood was a religious order and its introduction into Anglicanism was controversial. From Life and Letters of Thomas Thellusson Carter edited by the Ven. W. H. Hutchings, M.A. Archdeacon of Cleveland (London: Longmans, Green and Co., 1903) in Chapter 6 The Community of St John the Baptist: MR. CARTER'S first great work, besides his parish work, is to be found in that of "Mercy for the Fallen." The Penitentiary really began in 1849; the Sisterhood was founded in 1852. The one work was not only after the other, but also in consequence of the other. We must, even at the risk of repetition, mention again the achievement of Mrs. Tennant in taking into her own house girls from the worst quarter of a garrison town, and the zealous service of the Rev. Wellington Johnson, better known now as the late Archdeacon Furse, who combined with Eton duties some of the labours of an additional curate, and took the deepest interest in what may be called the venture of Mrs. Tennant, as afterwards he was always interested in everything to do with penitentiary work. We also are informed that Mrs. Tennant, after resigning the care of her refuge, first in Clewer village, and after on Clewer Hill, continued some form of rescue work in Bier Lane, Windsor. It was about this time the germ of this great Sisterhood appeared in the persons of Mrs. Monsell, the future Sister Elizabeth, and Sister Ellen.

After the establishment of the Church Building Commissioners in 1818 the Lambeth Church Building Committee decided that these three plots would form a fine site for a church and burial ground. (ref. 204) The building restrictions contained in the Inclosure Act of 1806 had to be modified by an amending Act of 1821 to permit the erection of the church. (ref. 194) The land belonging to the Rector was then conveyed to the Commissioners gratuitously for the site of the church. (ref. 205) The Archbishop's land was made into a burial ground (ref. 206) and £88 was paid to Robert Stone's Trustees for their piece. The numerous gorges in the neighbouring rocks have been taken advantage of to surround the city with a series of lakes, which, shaded by fine trees and bordered by fantastic crags, add much beauty to the suburbs. The city itself is modern, and is laid out in wide and regular streets. A streamlet separates the civil station and cantonment from the native quarter; but, though the climate is mild, a swampy hollow beneath renders the site unhealthy for Europeans. Formerly the capital of the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, Jubbulpore is now the headquarters of a brigade in the 5th division of the southern army. It is also one of the most important railway centres in India, being the junction of the Great Indian Peninsula and the East Indian systems. ...

The intelligence of his death was received yesterday by telegram from England but no particulars have been given as to the immediate cause of his decease. Edward Eyre Williams was admitted to the bar in England in 1833 and shortly after the foundation of Port Phillip made his way to this colony. For something like 10 years he practised his profession in Melbourne having as contemporaries two gentlemen who subsequently became his colleagues on the bench. We refer to Sir William F. Stawell and Sir Redmond Barry. In 1844 Mr. Williams was elected a member of the Bourke District Council – a local body constituted under the New South Wales Act, 5th and 6th Victoria c.76 – with which he remained connected for some seven or eight years. On the separation of Port Phillip from New South Wales, Mr. Williams thought of obtaining an elective seat in the Legislative Council of Victoria. With that view, he solicited the suffrages of the electors of the Loddon district, but we believe his efforts to obtain a seat did not

		extend beyond the publication of an address. Probably a reason for this may be found in the fact that in the list official appointments rendered necessary by the realisation of Victorian independence and published on the 15th July, 1851, the name of Mr. Williams appeared as Commissioner of the Court of Requests for the city of Melbourne and the County of Bourke. In January, 1852, he was created Chairman of Quarter Sessions. This appointment he held in conjunction with that of commissioner of the Court of Requests, but he was not debarred thereby from continuing practice in the Supreme Court, of which he appears to have had at that time the "lions share." In April 1852, he took office as Solicitor General, by virtue of which position he became a nominee member of the Legislative Council; but the time during which he was permitted to enjoy these honours was too short to enable him to leave any mark on the legislation of the country. A greater distinction awaited him. The increase of business in the Supreme Court rendered the appointment of a third judge an imperative necessity. The honour was conferred upon Mr. Williams, of whom nothing was afterwards heard in public life save in connexion with his judicial duties. Early in 1859, having obtained leave of absence, he visited England, and returned in 1861. From that date till 1874 he continued to act as judge of the Supreme Court. For some years before that he had not been in very good health, and in the early part of 1871 his medical advisers recommended that he should immediately retire from the bench. He accordingly forwarded his resignation to the Government, which was accepted. On the day when he last presided in the Supreme Court there was a large attendance of the members of the bar, and on their behalf the then Attorney General Mr. J. W. Stephen (now Mr. Justice Stephen) expressed regret on account of his honour's retirement, and referred to the courtesy with which he had treated all the members of the profession. The late judge shortly afterwards left the colony for England, where he had since resided. In 1878, he was created a knight bachelor in recognition of the services he had rendered to the colony in the various public positions that he had filled. As a judge, the late Sir E. E. Williams was patient and assiduous, and his intimate knowledge of that branch of the law known as pleading was especially recognised by those who practised before him. He leaves two sons, one of whom is Mr. Hartley Williams, a prominent member of the Victorian bar.

AGED 88.	 Headstone surmounted by a Celtic cross. Thomas Robert Malthus (1766-1834) was a noted British scholar whose ideas on society and economics and, in particular population growth, the Corn Laws and Poor Laws were influential on people such as William Pitt the Younger, Charles Darwin and Alfred Russel Wallace. His main works were: The Nature of Rent (1815), Principles of Political Economy (1820) and Definitions in Political Economy (1827). He wrote many pamphlets and tracts such as An Essay on the Principle of Population (1798) and An Inquiry into the Nature and Progress of Rent (1815). After education at home and then with Rev Richard Graves at Claverton Rectory, he studied at Cambridge University and was made a fellow of Jesus College in 1793. Malthus married his first cousin once-removed, Harriet Eckersall, on 12 Apr 1804, and had three children: Henry, Emily and Lucy. T. R. Malthus The Unpublished Papers in the Collection of Kanto Gakuen University (Cambridge University Press, 2004) includes: Harriet Malthus' diary of a family tour of Scotland in 1826, letters to Harriet Malthus from her mother, Catherine Eckersall. In 1805, he was appointed professor of history and political economy (the first holder of such an academic office) at the East India Company's college in Haileybury, Hertfordshire, where he remained until his death. In a letter from Malthus to David Ricardo dated 19 Jun 1815 and written at Weston House, Guildford a postscript has "My address in a few days will be Claverton House near Bath". In a letter from Malthus to Ricardo dated 19 Jul 1815 written at Claverton House, which has reflections on the recent defeat of Napoleon, it has "We shall leave our friends here on the 25th and must be at Haileybury on the 26th, so that even if you were at Gatcomb we could hardly pay you a visit this
