

Section F

Section F is part of the cemetery which opened in 1907. However, rows A and Aa at the western end were part of the original extent of the cemetery. There is an east-west path along row 47 which continues the path from the chapel. The southern side is bounded by part of the boundary wall, which has fallen down in some places. On the other side of this wall is Smallcombe Wood.

The south-western corner of the section is overgrown by large laurel bushes and brambles. For rows F and G some undergrowth had to be removed to gain access. The lower parts of rows Aa-C are under trees and access to some graves in rows B and C is difficult because of low branches. The graves are 7'x3' with, for most rows, an inter-row gap of 18". However, in common with Section G, the gap between rows H and I is 4' up to the path at position 47. There are 242 graves and 200 memorials.

In or about 1805 he went into partnership with William Detmar in the business of sugar refining at premises in Bath Terrace on Back Lane, and later in Breezers Hill and Virginia Street, until William's death in 1824. Carsten Holthouse II married about 1809, and in 1816 leased residential property in Upper Edmonton, borrowing capital from Sophia Dirs. In 1823 he extended the lease on the property, and from the events following William Detmar's untimely death it is clear that he was over-extending himself financially. ... Carsten Holthouse II married Harriet Parkin sometime before 1810. They had 5 sons - a surgeon, a lawyer, a vicar, and 2 who emigrated to Australia. Their children, in turn, appear to have followed these professions. After Harriet's death, Carsten married Anna Maria Staple in 1849, by which time he appears to be a wine merchant in Bath. Mr. Henniker-Heaton, who is now no more than fifty-one years old, is the son of Lieutenant-Colonel Heaton, and belongs to an old Lancashire family. His father's death throwing his future into his own hands at sixteen, he went to Australia, where, besides rising to public influence as a journalist, he amassed a fortune in stock raising, and returning to England in 1881, stepped at once into official life in connection with the Colonies. He first entered Parliament in 1885, and immediately took up that question of postal reform, which he has only relinquished with victory. Mrs Henniker-Heaton is the beautiful "Rose Lorraine," who inspired so much of the poetry of the Australian poet Henry Kendall (sic). In Australia John Henniker-Heaton worked for a series of newspapers first as journalist and later editor. In 1873 he married Rose Bennett, daughter of the proprietor of the Australian Town and Country Journal. After returning to England in 1884, in 1885 he was elected MP for Canterbury, a position he held for 25 years. He was made a baronet in 1912. He died at Geneva on 8 Sep 1914. He has an entry in the Dictionary of Australian Biography.

		Henry Kendall (1841-1882) was born at Ulladara, near Milton NSW. In 1863 he was appointed as a clerk in the Surveyor General's Department in Sydney and in 1869 resigned this to pursue his writing, moving to Melbourne. He submitted poems to newspapers. He returned to Sydney in 1871 where he had greater success. Hailed as a native-born poet, he has an elaborate grave in Waverley cemetery, Sydney. From the Courier-May (of Brisbane) of Sat 18 Aug 1934 p18: "A ROMANCE of long ago in Sydney is brought to mind by the name of Rose Henniker Heaton, on a novel, 'Cruising with James,' based on an imaginary sea trip. Her mother was Rose Bennett, a daughter of the Bennetts of 'The Empire' and the old 'Evening News.' About 50 years ago, when Kendall was writing lyrics in Randall Terrace, in Enmore, in Sydney, he fell passionately in love with Rose Bennett, and they were engaged to be married. But Kendall quarrelled with her in one of his jealous moods because he thought she had flirted with a man who afterwards married Kendall's youngest sister. Rose was proud and haughty, and refused to acknowledge any fault. Later she married Henniker-Heaton and went with him to England, where he became a member of the House of Commons, and was knighted for his interests in penny postage. Mean while Kendall nursed his grief, kept for years a faded ribbon that Rose had worn, and poured out his regrets in an emotional lyric, called 'Rose Lorraine', in which he sang: 'The faintest memory of her face, The wilful face that hurt me so, Is followed by a fiery trace That Rose Lorraine must never know.' One of Rose Henniker-Heaton's sons became an Administrator in the Falkland Islands, Cyprus, and other Crown colonies; and her daughter, Rose (now Mrs. Adrian Porter), became, like her father, an author and a traveller on the Inky Way." The marriage of Algernon Berkeley Paget to Elizabeth Ann Henniker-Heaton was registered 1909/Q1 St Geo H Sq. Captain Ritso, Surgeon Corfield, Quarter-Master Stevens, and 30 NCO’s and men were all that survived of Lord Lake’s ‘Handfull of Heroes’ to claim their medals. Surgeon Corfield’s medal is held by the regimental museum. Approximately 66 clasps for Allighur and 100 clasps for Laswarree were issued to European recipients. Only 26 medals, including Staff, Surgeons and Quartermaster’s, were awarded to officers of British regiments for services during the second Mahratta War 1803-05. John Ritso, the son of Captain George Frederick Ritso, R.E., was born in 1772 and served as a volunteer in the army sent against Tippoo Sahib of Mysore following his invasion of the British allied state of Travancore in 1790. Ritso was commissioned Ensign on 11 November 1791 in H.M.’s 76th Foot, one of the four British regiments raised in 1787 for service in India, and was present in 1792 at the Siege of Seringapatam. Promoted Lieutenant on 5 October 1793 and Captain on 19 July 1803, Ritso served in the Hindustan Campaign during the Second Mahratta War as Major of Brigade of 1st Brigade under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. William Monson of the 76th, and marched up the Ganges to Agra and Delhi with the Grand Army under the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Lake, against Scindia’s domains in the north. According to the journal of Lieutenant John Pester, Ritso was present at the Capture of Allighur on 4 September 1803, the first major action of the campaign. ... Following a string of successes which merited some units honorary colours inscribed with the legend LAKE and VICTORY, Ritso took part, on the first day of November 1803, in the desperately fought encounter at Laswaree - ‘as fierce a fight as ever was fought by men’ as Fortescue called it - as dramatic as Assye and even more decisive. In the late summer of 1804, a force under Ritso’s chief, Monson, was detached and marched south to meet Holkar. The enterprise ended in disaster.

Names	Inscriptions	Notes
		Monson, ignominiously driven from the field, was forced to turn back and reached Delhi with the loss of half his guns and stores and half his force. In 1804, Ritso was appointed Aide-de-Camp to the Marquess of Wellesley, then in the penultimate year of his Governor-Generalship. In 1806, he exchanged with Lord Arthur Somerset to the West India Regiment, and returning to England was appointed Major of Brigade at Kingsbridge in Devon. In July of the following year he sold out, and afterwards became Professor of Fortifications at Woolwich until 1823. Captain Ritso survived into his nineties and eventually died at Tunbridge Wells on 8 September 1866. Ref: Modern English Biography (Boase); Historical Record of The 76th 'Hindoostan' Regiment (Hayden); War and Sport in India, 1802-1806, An Officer's Diary (Pester)."

He was a civil engineer by profession, being a D.Sc. of London University, M.I.C.E. (England) and M.I.C.E (Ireland). In 1906 he wrote a book on The Problems of Flight. Two years after his marriage in 1907 to the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loader Smith of Southsea, he went to China as Professor of Civil Engineering at Tanshan, a post which he occupied until 1915 when he went to Shanghai, where he remained in engineering appointments till his retirement in 1937. On the outbreak of the Second World War he was employed by the Admiralty and was concerned in the preparation of the Mulberry Harbour. It was in China that his interest in astronomy developed and he became an authority on the history of Chinese astronomy as evidenced by the scholarly articles which he contributed to various journals. An article Did Ancient Chinese culture come from Egypt? which appeared in 1929 in the Journal of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, is perhaps the first indication that he was also interested in Egyptian astronomy. Since then he has made contributions on the subject in the Journal of Egyptian Archaeology and the Observatory (J.E.A., 1940, 1941. 1948/9 and Observatory 62, 100) which showed that he had made himself familiar with nearly all that has been written on the subject in modern times.

		The Clifton Magazine 2008 has an article entitled John Alexander Leigh (Brown's House 1909-1911) by Alan Jones. It cites examples from the diary that he kept while serving in the 1914-18 war and has: "J A Leigh was born 5th August 1893 and at Clifton for the 4th & 5th forms, leaving in 1911 for the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich. ... Promoted Lieutenant on 9th June 1915, Acting Captain from 4 February - 3 September 1917 and Acting again from 12 - 19 October 1917. On the 20 October the then BC of 122nd, Maj Frances Thicknesse, was killed at Passchendaele whilst reconnoitring a new observation position and Leigh is recorded as taking his place, as an Acting Major. Leigh was awarded the Military Cross for his work during this period. He remained as BC until 9 June 1918, commanding the Battery through the bitter winter in the Ypres Salient and the desperate fighting which first held, and then defeated, the final German offensives in early 1918 (during which the Battery lost two guns). He was then posted to the Home Establishment, no doubt for a well-earned break - he had been on continuous active service with the Battery since March 1915. His service is unclear until 1920 when he is known to have been in India with 'Coast Defence'; by mid-1921 he was with a medium battery, still in India, moving at some stage to Gibraltar, again with a medium battery. He was the Adjutant of III Medium Brigade in Malta from March 1923 - March 1926 and then moved to a medium battery in Larkhill. Completing the Gunnery Staff Course in 1929 he then became an Instructor at Scottish Command. Promoted substantive Major on 1 January 1933 he commanded 56 Battery (Tombs' Troop) from 1933 to March 1936 and then 79 (H) Battery from 1936 to 1939. He commanded the School of Survey from June 1940 to October 1942. John Leigh retired with the honorary rank of Colonel on 4 October 1946 and died on 21 August 1952 at Bath." From the burial register: John Alexander Leigh, aged 57, of South Lodge, Camden Rd, Bath, was buried on 25 Aug 1952. The family has an entry in Armorial Families: a Directory of Gentlemen of Coat-Armour by Fox-Davies

SARAH GRAND'S HOME PARTLY DESTROYED. A serious fire, in which Miss Allen, a cook, lost her life, occurred early on Saturday morning at Crowe Hall, Bath, the residence of Mme. Sarah Grand, who is Mayoress of Bath. The greater part of the mansion, which was bought a few years ago for £15,000 by Mr. W. Tindall, with whom Miss Tindall and Mme. Sarah Grand resides, was destroyed. Much valuable china was saved by the police, and the library escaped destruction. The outbreak was discovered about 5 o'clock by Miss Tindall, who was awakened by a smell of smoke and roused the household. The chauffeur tried to put out the flames with a patent extinguisher, but dense smoke drove him out of the sitting room, in which the fire originated. The four maids slept in part of the house above this room. Three of them forced on to the roof by the smoke, passed along the parapet and were rescued by means of a ladder. The fourth, Miss Allen, who was 62 years of age, was apparently following them, but went back to her room for something, and must have been suffocated by the smoke. It was not noticed, in the confusion, that she had not got away with the other maids, and her body was not found until late in the day. A few hours before the fire was discovered Mme. 		Information from Georgina Maltby: Salusbury grave, Smallcombe Cemetery The roots of the Salusbury family were in Wales, but in the late 19th century, Llewellyn Salusbury became established as a solicitor in Leicester. He and his wife Charlotte had six children: one son, who followed his father into the solicitor's practice, and five daughters, none of whom married, perhaps because their mother was an invalid for the last forty years of her life, and they are understood to have helped in caring for her. At least three of the daughters were artistic, and one of these became a stained-glass artist. Theodora Salusbury (1875-1956) followed four courses of training, including at the Slade School in London, and as an apprentice to Christopher Whall, a leading stained-glass artist and teacher. Between the two world wars, Theodora Salusbury created windows for nearly thirty churches from Yorkshire to Cornwall to Surrey. Her nearest windows to Bath are in Newchurch, Monmouthshire and in Hannington, Wiltshire. Today, her work is well- considered by experts in the field. In style, Theodora Salusbury was an Arts and Crafts artist, both designing and making her windows at her studios in Cornwall and London. Her windows can be distinguished by her use of rich colour, and by the immediacy of the figures, and most bear her signature, a peacock. At around the time of the Second World War she came to live in Bath with her four sisters, who were already established at 14
