Introduction

The approach from the south

The church of St Catherine

From Rambles about Bath and its Neighbourhood by R E Peach (6th edition, 1876) in a section on St Catherine on p351:

It is not mentioned in the Domesday Book, but its Church dedicated to St. Catherine, the patron saint of the citizens of Bath, bears marks of remote antiquity, although nearly rebuilt by Prior John Cantlow in 1499.

Its square embattled tower, which contains four bells, is connected with the nave by an arch resting on Norman capitals of peculiar design, and has a small Norman widow. The square font of Caen stone is adorned with interlacing circular sculpture. The nave is 27 feet long; in it is a beautiful pulpit placed against the north wall, still retaining a portion of its decoration, which appear to resemble in style and colouring the screen at Wellow. Above the arch, between the nave and chancel, the ten commandments are painted. . . . The chancel contains memorials of the Blanchards and Parrys, lords of the manor. The east window bears the name of the builder (Prior Cantlow), and the date, with the arms of the Abbey-St. Peter's key crossed by a sword, and the prior's mitre: in the smaller compartments are roses, with the midday sun frequently repeated. The other windows are emblazoned with them, and also with an eagle having a scroll from his beak bearing the words Prior Cantlow. The exterior of the church is very pleasing, from the regularity of the architecture and the square perpendicular widows. The interior was repaired during the year 1847, when a new communion table, of polished cedar, with velvet cover and monogram, and a service of communion plate, were presented by the Hon. Emily Anne Strutt, in accordance with the will of her father.

Two windows in the church commemorate the 'reseating and repairing' which occurred in 1846 from a bequest by Col Joseph Strutt.

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 13 Nov 1862 p5:

On Wednesday, the 12th inst, the parishioners of St Catherine's, Batheaston (numbering upwards of 50), were treated to a substantial dinner, at St Catherine's Court, of beef, ale, and plum pudding, by the Hon. Miss Strutt, lady of the manor, in honour of the Prince of Wales attaining his majority, and its being the birthday of the Hon. John William Strutt, eldest son of Lord Rayleigh, of Terling Place, Essex, The dinner was enjoyed by all, and the bells of the village church rang merrily during the greater part of the day.

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 3 Dec 1863, reporting on an anti-Church Rate meeting which occurred at Bath's Guildhall '16l. 6s. 11. was raised by church-rate in the parish of St. Catherine, near Bath, but only 9s. were spent on the venerable edifice.'

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 27 Dec 1883 p3:

John Cantlow was elected Prior in 1589, and during presidentship the Archbishop of Canterbury visited the Abbey; but Cantlow seems to have done nothing towards the restoration of the church, though he rebuilt the hospital of St Mary Magdalen, Holloway, as well as the chancel of St Catherine's, the east window of which is filled with stained glass to his memory, and at the foot of it is the following inscription :- "orate pro anima Domini Johannis Cantlow, quondam Prioris hane Cacella fieri fecit, An. Dom, 1490;"

On the southern wall of the tower is a sundial with the inscription:

VT [V]MBRA SIC VITA

(As a shadow so life (doth fly).) The words of this inscription (and variants) occur on sundials on various churches and other buildings around the country and presumably dates from the rebuilding of the tower.

Also on the southern wall is an inscription:

THIS TOWER & NORTH
SAID WALL OF YE CHURCH
WAS REBUILT IN YE YEAR
1704
HENRY BLANCHERD ESQ
AND M^R IOHN TYLY
CHVRCH WARDENS

From 1813 there have been 292 burials with the number of burials usually only 1 or 2 per year. An exception is 1833 when there were 8 burials. Those under the age of 11 make up 15.8% which is a lower percentage than some of Bath's poorer parishes.

Burial Registers

His caustic but humorous comments on the human comedy and the variety of experience from which he illustrated his conversation made him a delightful and unusual companion. He was one of those men in whose society one could not fail to be happy and interested. He made his mark in such diverse regions as Egypt, Danzig, and Geneva, and his talents were worthy of greater official recognition than was actually obtained.

					From Rambles about Bath and its Neighbourhood by R E Peach (6th edition, 1876) in a section on St Catherine on p352: The chancel which is eighteen feet long contains the tomb of William Blanchard, who lived in the seventeenth century. It consists of a pediment and cornice, supported by two Corinthian columns, their capitals being gilt. The male figure is clothed in the half-armor of King Charles's time, the female being attired in the dress of the period. Both kneel; on the pediment are three daughters, with the son kneeling at a reading desk. The epitaph on the tablet bears the date of 1631.

Blanchard died the following year and it was his son William who actually bought St Catherine from Harington in 1594 and set about remodelling the house. . . . When the last William Blanchard died in 1747, St Catherine's Court passed to his niece Quirina, who was married to Thomas Parry. A string of Parrys followed, but the last Parry heiress married one Captain Alexander Hamilton Erle, who ran through his wife's fortune. Perhaps it was extravagant of him to build a large drawing room on the south side of the house over the kitchen. He was forced to sell St Catherine's Court in 1841 to Col Joseph Strutt, whose grandson Richard was another builder of discrimination.
