

Section E

The eastern section of the cemetery is between the chapel and the eastern boundary wall. The boundaries between this section and the adjacent ones are not clear; there is no path or other marker which shows its limit.

In theory there are 467 graves but in practice there are only just over 200 memorials and a few dozen grave numbers that appear on the original map have no counterpart in the indexes of burials. There are 12 rows of graves which are aligned, for the most part, parallel to the eastern boundary wall.

The area by the eastern wall of the mortuary chapel has been used for the burial of priests and members of religious orders.

LORIN LATHROP On Saturday afternoon, in the beautiful Roman Catholic Cemetery at Perrymead were laid to rest the remains of Mrs. Lorin Lathrop, wife of the American Consul at Cardiff (formerly of Bristol), and better known to the reading public on both sides of the Atlantic as Annie Wakeman. ... The touching tribute of Mr. Clarence Rook, formerly of Bristol, and now of the "Daily Chronicle," was rendered in that paper on Saturday, as follows:—"A personal note of sorrow must creep into the announcement of the death of Annie Wakeman Lathrop. She was one of the chief journalistic ambassadors from America to London, and she wrote with a love of England day by day, and she produced the best book in the world about a London charwoman. She married a countryman of her own, who holds an official position of great responsibility . . . It is scarcely difficult to explain the love that Annie Wakeman gathered around her, since she had up to the last painful months the love for the life of others. And in those last months it was the etiquette of her friends—on the hint of her husband—to send her the

Those letters should make a huge wreath of lilies of love for a husband to lay upon the coffin of Annie Wakeman Lathrop.” Autobiography of a Charwoman (1900) Squalid adventures and heroic labours of a poor Londoner dictated to Annie Wakeman and recorded in phonetic style. From Knox County Historical Society, Mount Vernon, Ohio concerning Lorin Andrews Lathrop (1858-1929): “Lorin Andrews Lathrop was a popular writer and an important political figure during the early 20th century. He was born in 1858 in Gambier, Ohio where his father was principal of Kenyon's Milner Hall. Little biographical information has been located regarding his early life. Lorin married Kittie Dewitt in 1875 and began his career as a journalist in San Francisco. He became active in politics, and in 1902, President Grover Cleveland appointed him American Consul to England. From 1902 to 1914 he served in this diplomatic capacity, living in Bristol, England. At the beginning of World War I Lathrop was transferred to Wales. In 1919, he was appointed consul to the Bahamas, where he served until his retirement in 1924. Lathrop died in Paris in 1929. Throughout his diplomatic career Lathrop was an active writer. In addition to his journalistic and diplomatic writing, he wrote many short stories published in serial form in The Saturday Evening Post using the pen name, Kenyon Gambier. His other pseudonym was Andrew Loring, which he used in writing material for British periodicals.”

HIS GRATITUDE TO PORTSMOUTH CABMEN To his narrow home in a quiet corner at Perrymead, Bath, better known as "Guinea-pig Jack," was borne on Wednesday, at the advanced age of 76. Known best at Bath city since 1848, he wandered about the South of England, and was well known at Brighton, Hastings, Plymouth, and Portsmouth. He had a keen remembrance for such as were kind to him, and particularly spoke of the generous help shown to him by the Portsmouth cab-drivers. There must be many still living in the busy town who will be pleased to think he cherished with honest gratitude their kindly actions. Born at Chiavari, near Genoa, Domenico was probably registered as a conscript, five foot nothing in height, this liliputian warrior often migrated with the swallows to the land of his birth, there to report himself ready for the call.
