Introduction

The church of St Mary the Virgin

From the Imperial Gazetteer of England and Wales 1870-72 by John Marius Wilson:

LIMPLEY-STOKE, a village and a chapelry in Bradford parish, Wilts. The village stands near the river Avon, the Kennet and Avon canal, the Bathampton branch of the Great Western railway, and the boundary with Somerset, 3¼ miles W of Bradford ; presents a romantic appearance, as seen from the ascent toward Freshford; commands a curious view of the river, the canal, and the railway, winding side by side, at different elevations; down the valley; is environed by hanging woods and orchards, and by a wild declivity, with picturesque features ; and has a railway station, a recent hydropathic establishment, and a girls' reformatory. The chapelry was reconstituted in 1846, and is conjoined with Winsley. Post-town, Bradford- on- Avon. Pop. in 1861, 985. Houses, 218. The living is a p. curacy in the diocese of Salisbury. Value, £147. Patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Bristol. The church is small; and there is a Wesleyan chapel.

Originally dedicated to St Edith of Wilton, a daughter of King Edgar, it was subsequently (many hundreds of years later) rededicated to St Mary. The church is believed to be Saxon in origin (Saxon doorway, herring-bone arrangement of flat stones).

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 31 May 1860 p6:

Within a mile of Hinton Abbey is Limpley Stoke Church, built on the summit of the hill, but the village that once surrounded it has gradually been removed into the valley so that only a cottage or two are within a quarter of a mile of the church. It is a very pretty little church, but I more particularly call your attention to it in consequence of the churchyard containing the most ancient ledge tombs in the west of England, whilst they are sufficiently numerous and of successive dates to enable the antiquary to read the history of the origin of the monumental effigy of which we have such fine examples in our cathedrals, The earliest have an incised floriated cross cavalry, and on the side to show that it is a knight a sword; for a lady, a pair of shears (the scissors of those days.) These "rude insignia of office" are then abandoned, the cross, instead of being simply incised, is carved in relief, with greater or less ornament; the next step is the formation in the stones of a quatre foil, or other simple form, to appear as if cut through the actual coffin, disclosing beneath the head of the deceased carved in stone; the next has a similar opening for the feet . . .

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 15 Sep 1864 p6:

FRESHFORD AND LIMPLEY STOKE (by rail 4½ miles).— Freshford Church, perpendicular. Manor house, where Sir W. Napier wrote his "History of the Peninsular War." Limpley Stoke Church, ancient Norman door and perpendicular pulpit, In the churchyard are 13 curious gravestones, from an early date to the fifteenth century.

From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 8 Aug 1895 p5 in a letter concerning Elizabeth chalices and their forms:

For instance Limpley Stoke church possesses a chalice, bearing the date 1577, . . . It is a plain straight cup with a paten . . .

The village had a girls' reformatory run by the (Anglican) Sisters of the Ascension. (The organisation has been founded in 1895 see The Religious Communities of The Church of England by Allan T Cameron (1918)). It offered laundry services (Bath Chronicle 21 Mar 1895 p4), similar to the Penitentiary in Walcot Street, Bath, and more widely the much-condemned Magdalen Laundries in Ireland.

A southern aisle and vestry were added in 1921 to designs of Charles Nicholson with a Saxon arch incorporated into the arcade. A plaque commemorates the addition of the aisle.

From the Bath Chronicle of Sat 5 Nov 1921 p29:

LIMPLEY STOKE CHURCH. Dedication of New South Aisle to the Fallen Villagers. The Church of St. Mary the Virgin, Limpley Stoke, was the scene on Tuesday, of a unique service of thanksgiving and remembrance. As a thank-offering for the precious memory of the nine sons of that village who perished in the war, a new south aisle has been added to this ancient church; and Tuesday afternoon (All Saints' Day), this was dedicated by the Archdeacon of Wilts. The Clergy and some of the Congregation.

From the Wiltshire Times of Sat 29 Jun 1929 p2:

LIMPLEY STOKE CHURCH
DEDICATION OF NEW WORK IN CHANCEL.
THE ARCHDEACON OF WILTS will Dedicate the New Work on SATURDAY (TO-MORROW), JUNE 29th, at 3 p.m.

From the Bath Chronicle of Sat 4 May 1935 p23 in a summary of Bath's progress during the late king's reign:

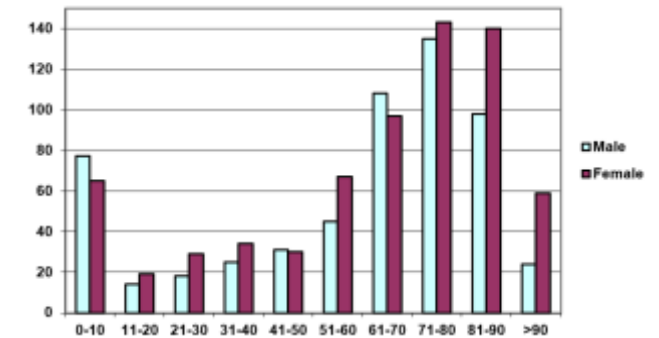

1921 . . . On November 1st a new aisle at Limpley Stoke Church was dedicated by the Archdeacon of Wilts (the Ven. E. J. Bodington).

The parish had been joined with Winsley but in 1970 the parish was separated from Winsley and united with Freshford, in the diocese of Bath and Wells, despite being in Wiltshire. In 1976 the parish of Hinton Charterhouse was added. The church is now in the parish of Freshford with Limpley Stoke and Hinton Charterhouse, alongside St Peter's, Freshford and St John the Baptist, Hinton Charterhouse.

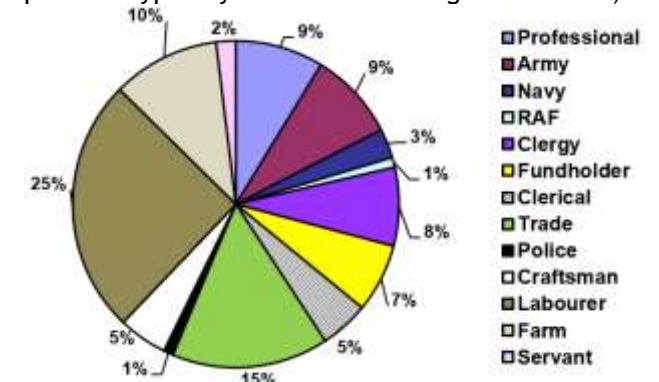

The church has been designated as Grade II* listed by Historic England. The description starts 'Anglican parish church. C10, early C13, C15, restored and south aisle added c1920 by Sir Charles Nicholson. Dressed limestone, rendered rubble stone nave, stone slate roof with coped verges.'

Limpley Stoke: Its Church and Its People by Arnold Lewis and Neil Mattingley. This 51-page document (available online) has a history of the village, its church and Baptist chapel as well as prominent families (Dicke, Fisher, Cooper/Baker, Pen-ruddocke, Hayward), and its mills.

Occupants

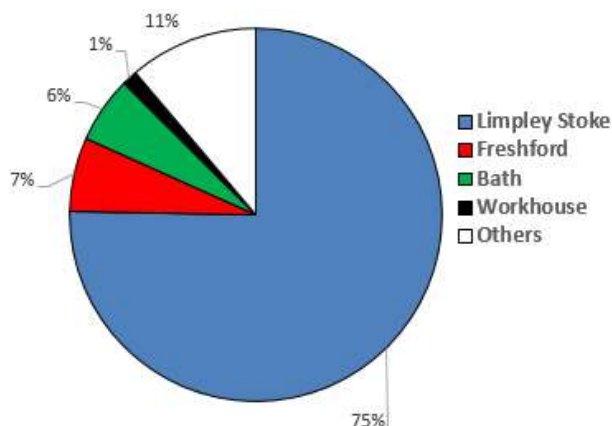

Of those buried from 1813, 11% were aged under 11 and 47% were aged over 70. The profile is typical of a relatively wealthy population. (Poorer urban parishes typically have about 40% aged under 11.)

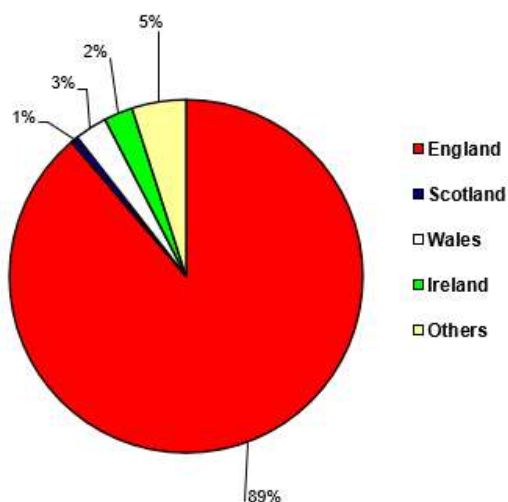

The occupation has been determined for several dozen of those buried. 38% were professional, military, clergy or fundholder. For the tradespeople this includes outfitter/tailors, timber merchants, shopkeepers and publicans.

Limpley Stoke - Memorial Inscriptions

In the period 1813-1912 75% of those buried were from Limpley Stoke -variously given as Stoke, Upper Stoke, and Lower Stoke - 7% were from Freshford, 6% from Bath and 1% from the (Bradford) workhouse.

Those buried were predominantly born in England. Of those born elsewhere, 6 were born in India and 3 in Australia.

England	336	89.1%
Scotland	3	0.8%
Wales	10	2.7%
Ireland	8	2.1%
Others	20	5.3%
	377

There were outbreaks of smallpox in 1763, 1766, 1767, 1779, 1784 and 1799 with the entries noting this. In 1770 of the 21 burials 13 were for children but only for one is smallpox given as a cause of death. In 1776 of the 16 burials 6 were noted as of 'a child'.

In the 1890s there were a few burials of people who were at the Hydropathic Establishment. Originally founded as the West of England Hydropathic Establishment in 1860, it continued under various owners until around 1900 when its provision of hydropathic treatments declined and it became more of an ordinary hotel, changing its name to Limpley Stoke Hydro Hotel while retaining its Turkish baths. Having been used for other purposes during WWII, it re-opened as a hotel and still exists as the Limpley Stoke Hotel.

There are two burials where the abode is given as 'reformatory'. As noted before, Limpley Stoke had a reformatory which opened in 1861 for up to 60 girls aged 14-16 who had been sentenced to detention by magistrates. In 1894 management was taken over by the Bishop of Salisbury. It closed in 1895 and the building no longer exists. (See Survey of Bath and District No. 27 Oct 2012 pp30-32)

The burial register has an entry for Benjamin Bunbury, 3 Mar 1784 'a black'. No references can be found in the newspapers. A court case in 1772 had established that, without a legal statute, the state of slavery was unsupported by common law in England and Wales.

Notable People

Miles Kington (1941-2008)

Journalist, author, humourist, musician and broadcaster. He is credited with the invention of Franglais, made up of a mixture of French and English and he wrote a number of magazine articles and books on this subject. He wrote 'I used to think that it was because [English] people really do talk French this way when they land in Calais, . . . It's only recently that I have discovered what I think is the truth: Franglais is the language that the English think the French ought to speak.'

Richard Middleton Hill (1858-1939)

Studied at New College, Oxford and initially went on to teach but soon in 1882 joined the Royal Irish Constabulary as a police cadet in Dublin. He served in Tipperary and county Clare, Killarney, co Kerry, and Dublin. He was awarded a pay increase for “Courageous and gallant conduct when engaged in protecting the Sherrif” at the Bodyke (1887) and (Vandeleur estate) Kilrush (1888) evictions in county Clare. In 1896 he was appointed Chief Constable for Cornwall in which post he remained until 1909.

William McMurdo Sweet (1860-1941)

Trained at the Royal Indian Engineering College, Egham, Surrey, posted to Assam at the age of 20 where he rose through the ranks to become chief engineer.

Graham Clarke Bladon (1899-1967)

First Commander of the Ceylon (later Sri Lanka) Air Force.

Sinderson

The churchyard has a memorial to two (unnamed) Sinderson infants, children of Harry & Elsie Sinderson. Curiously there are no Sinderson entries in the burial register and it is possible that they died in Iraq. Sir Harry Chapman Sinderson (1891-1974) was a doctor and medical advisor to King Faisal I of Iraq and physician to the royal family in the period 1923-1946. He was the founder and first Dean of the College of Medicine University of Baghdad in 1927. For a time in the 1920s they stayed at Limpley Stoke. They returned to England from Iraq in 1946. There is a memorial to Dr Sinderson in the Museum of the Order of St John, Clerkenwell.

Eric Snook (1921-2016)

Locally famous for his toyshop in Bath which existed at different locations in the city centre from 1952 until 2017. He was also a mayor of Bath in 1992.

Elizabeth Rebecca Ward (1880-1978)

Née Daniels. Author of poetry and children’s stories writing under the name Fay Inchfawn.

Adrian Lewis Ross Heath (1920-1992)

Abstract painter. Almost mostly London-based he taught at the Bath Academy of Art (1955-86) as well as various academic institutions. His wife and parents are also buried here.

Alexander Bailey Richmond (1782-1866)

A London-based journalist. His investigation into spies in Glasgow led him being accused of being a government spy himself. He took the matter to court and lost.

Burial Registers

At Wiltshire and Swindon Archives, Chippenham:
PR/Limpley Stoke St Mary the Virgin records incl marriage, baptism and burials registers, minutes and account books 1707-2000
2330/2 1813-1948

The single post-1948 register is with the parish.

Registers prior to 1813 have some unusual spellings of surnames and forenames; ‘Wilkins’ appears as ‘Wilkin’, and ‘Wilkin’, ‘Humphries’ as ‘Humphris’, and ‘Lowe’ as ‘Lo’.

The registers for 1813-1948 and 1948- have plot numbers for some burials starting from May 1937, these for an eastern extension to the churchyard.

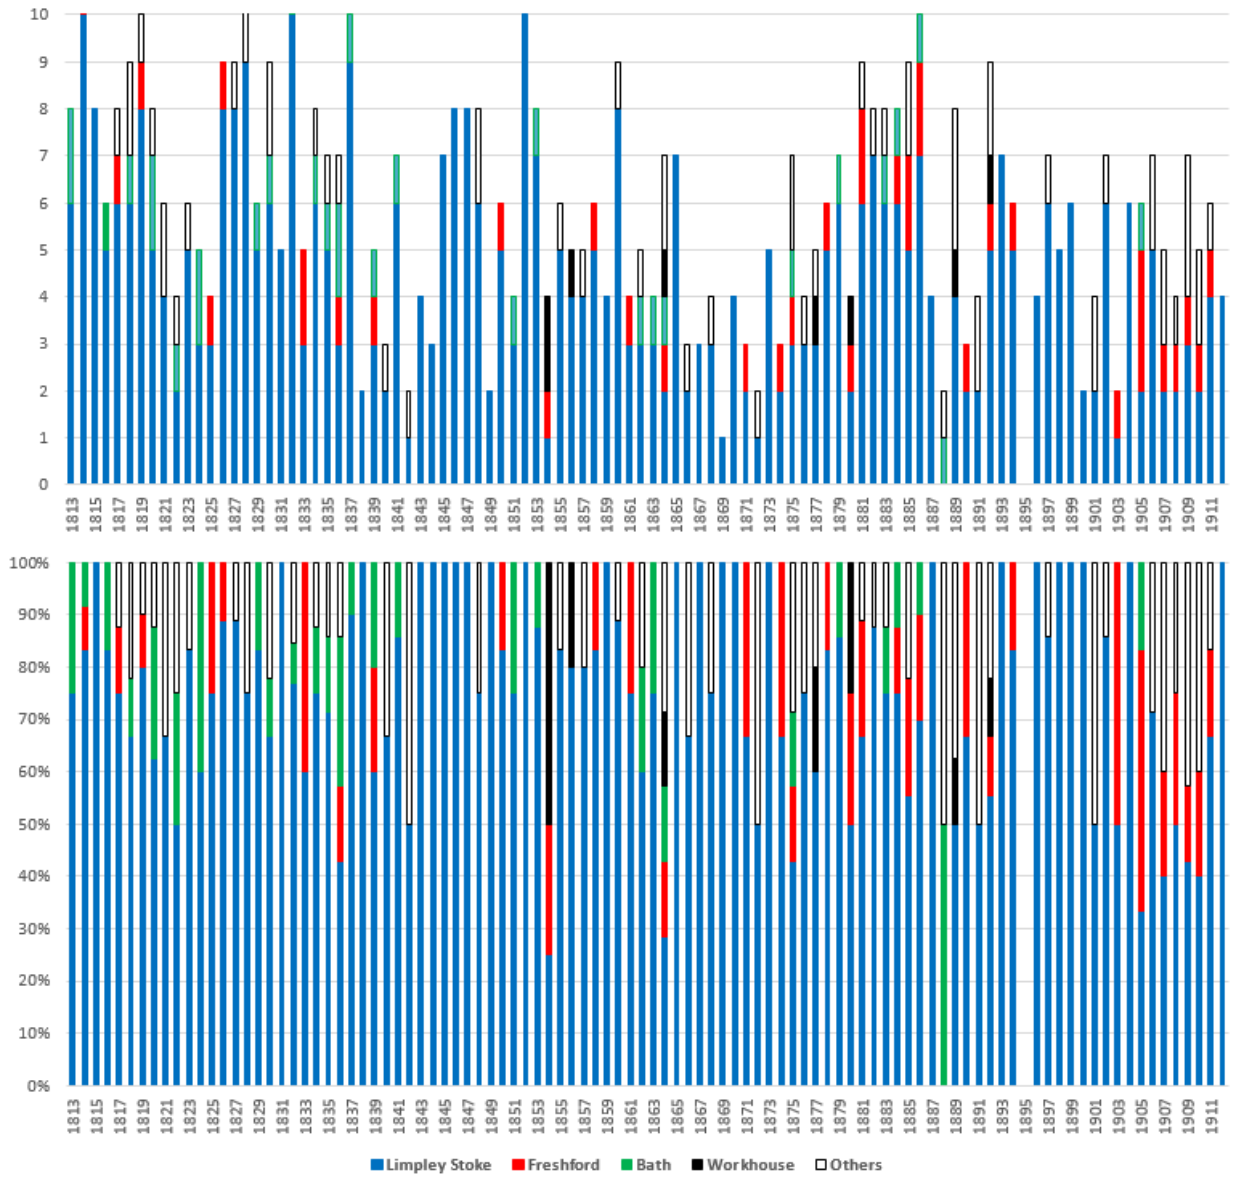

The vestry also has some framed maps of the different parts of the eastern extension annotated with the names of those buried. As a result, it has been possible to assign burial locations even in the absence of memorials or plot locations in the registers.

Previous Survey

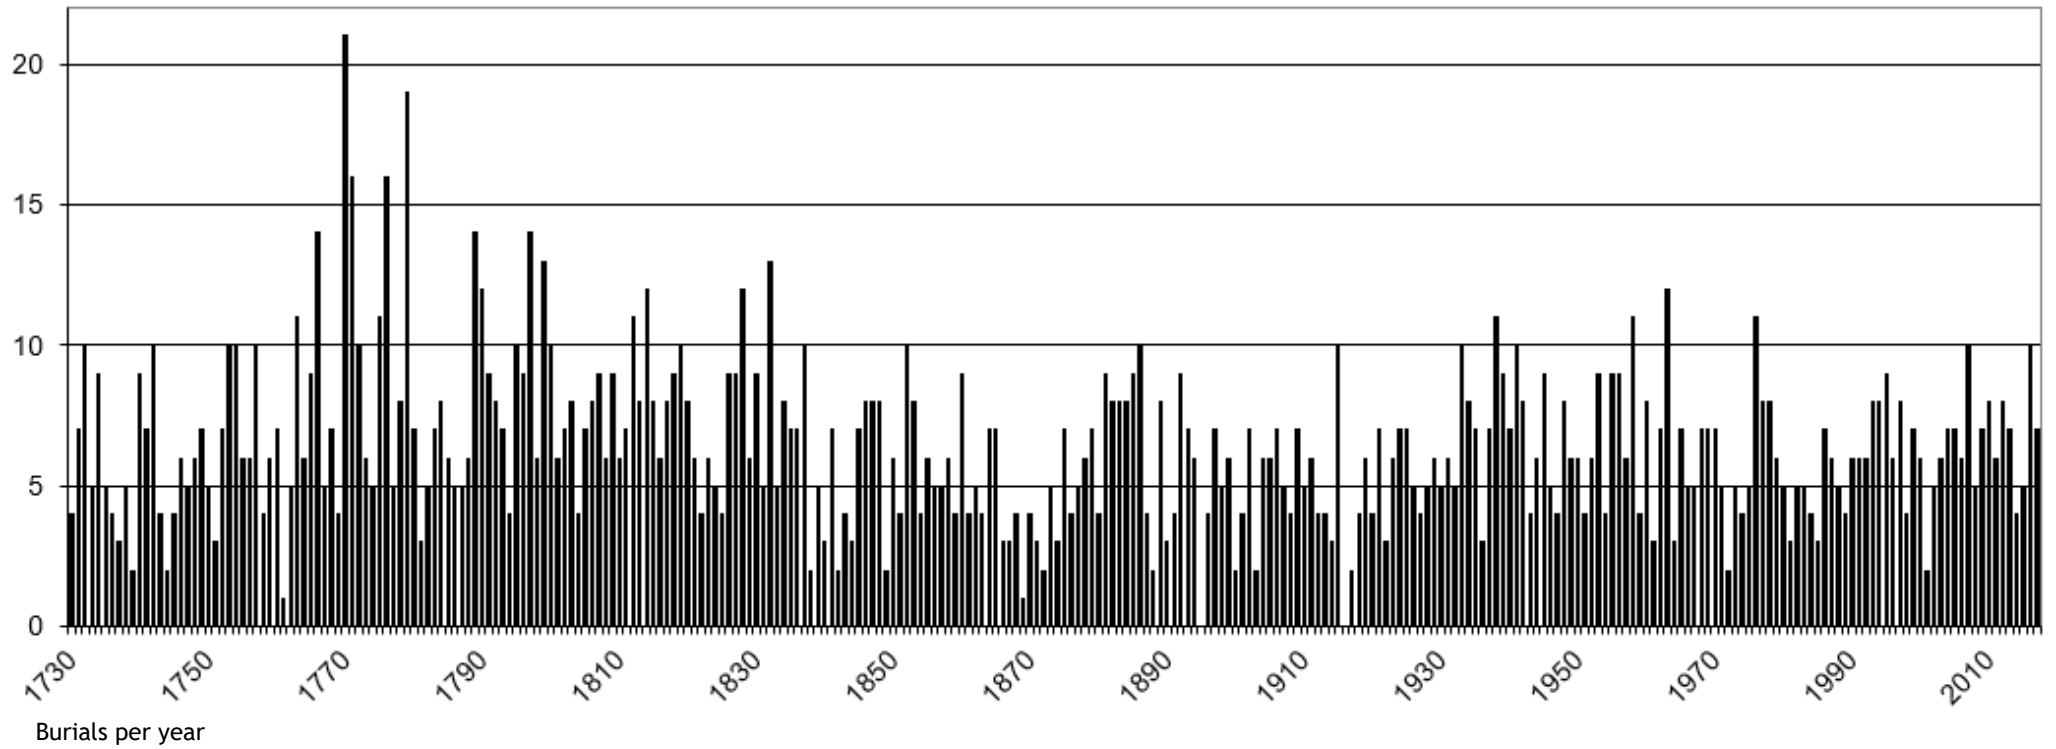

Limpley Stoke: Its Church and Its People - An illustrated history of the last thousand years by Arnold Lewis and Neil Mattingley (available online) has on pages 16-18 a section on memorials in the church with transcriptions and on pages 19-20 a description of the churchyard but no transcriptions.

I am grateful to the Wiltshire and Swindon Archives, Chippenham for allowing the photographing of a register and the parish for giving me access to the current register and its associated maps as well as access to less accessible internal memorials.

Section C

This section of the churchyard has 91 memorials. Just to the south of the church a platform has some early 19th century tombs and a group of slabs without inscriptions which are believed to date from the Middle Ages.

Further south is an extension to the churchyard with 19th century memorials arranged roughly in a grid.

Against the western wall of the church are three old memorials including one which seems to have been a ledger stone from inside the church and, from its style, dates from the 1600s.

The memorials in this section have been assigned sequential numbers starting at the western end.

And on page 5: SUDDEN DEATH OF DR. COWAN Mr. Fredric S. Cowan, the well-known physician and surgeon, of 27, Queen Square, died with painful suddenness on Tuesday. He was apparently in his ordinary health on Monday evening’, and attended a special service for Sunday school teachers at St-Andrew’s Church, where he was a sidesman, and helped collecting the offertory. This morning he got up usual, but complained of not feeling quite the thing, being troubled with internal pain. So he delayed going out on his round of calls, though the carriage was kept waiting at the door. He was sitting down in the dining room, Mrs. Cowan also being present, when he

		suddenly fainted away. His wife, much alarmed, ran to the front door, and seeing Dr. Kennedy, who was just coming down from his house at 3, Gay Street., beckoned, to him to come to her aid. He did so and Mr. F. Lace, who happened to be passing the same time, also went in with Dr. Kennedy. They found Mr. Cowan in an almost lifeless state; restoratives were tried in vain, and shortly after noon, about half an hour from the time they entered the house, Mr. Cowan expired. As the deceased had not been under medical advice an inquest will be necessary, and this afternoon the Coroner's officer was making inquiries. The greatest sympathy is felt with Mrs. Cowan, who, within a few months, has suffered the double bereavement of losing both husband and father under sad circumstances, for Mr. Cowan married the youngest daughter of the late Prebendary Angus Clerk, who passed away almost as unexpectedly not long ago. It will be remembered that Mr. Cowan on the 6th. inst. was speaking at a special vestry of St. Paul's congregation with respect his father-in-law's memorial in that church. The deceased gentleman also leaves two little daughters to mourn his loss. Mr. Cowan was the son of an old Bath surgeon, who also practised in Queen Square. After studying at St. George's Hospital and in Vienna, Mr. Cowan became a member of the Royal College of Surgeons, England, in 1878, and three years later Licentiate of the Royal College Physicians, London. He had practised in Bath for many years, and was much liked and respected. He was associated with several local medical charities, being late senior physician of the Eastern Dispensary, and also senior hon. medical officer of the Royal United Hospital. He was a member of the British Medical Association. For several important Assurance Companies Mr. Cowan was the medical referee. In the summer months Mr. Cowan resided at the Bungalow, Stoke. The building of this house on the high land above the village was resented the inhabitants, who claimed the site common land, and there were attempts to prevent the enclosure of the land, the dispute ending in the Law Courts, and being decided in Mr. Cowan's favour. Mr. Cowan, who was about 55

		Library of Australia, State Library of New South Wales in its biographical notes: Martinus Peter Hayward (1817-1904) was the son of Joakim Cooper Hayward (1782-1864) of Hayward's End, Stonehouse. A qualified doctor, he emigrated to South Australia on the Rajasthan in 1839-40. He was declared insolvent in the depression of 1843 and went back to England. He returned to Adelaide in 1846, serving as surgeon on the Phoebe. He combined a medical practice with property interests and became a notable member of South Australian society. He lived at McLaren Vale, served as a Justice of the Peace, presided at public meetings, and was an official at race meetings. In 1857 he and his family returned to England. Following the death of his father in 1864, Hayward became the owner of the Hayward's End estate. Johnson Frederick Hayward (1822-1912) was the brother of Martinus Hayward. He emigrated to South Australia on the Phoebe in 1846 and immediately was engaged by the pastoralist Price Maurice to work on his sheep station at Pekina. In 1851 Hayward acquired a half share of Aroona, a property in the Flinders Ranges owned by Dr John Harris Browne and his brother. At the time, Aroona was the most northerly property in South Australia and Hayward played a leading role in the development of the pastoral industry and in exploring the region. Mount Hayward and other landmarks in the Flinders Ranges are named after him. He sold his share in Aroona in 1861 and purchased Canowie Station near Hallett, 20 miles north of Burra. He retained an interest in Canowie until his death. He returned to England in 1864 and settled in Bath. From the Australian Dictionary of Biography: Charles Wiltens Andrée Hayward (1866-1950), journalist and writer, was born on 21 July 1866 at Court Huntington, Herefordshire, England, second son of Johnson Frederick Hayward (1822-1912), gentleman, and his wife Ellen Margaret, née Litchfield. Johnson Hayward had migrated to South Australia in 1847, and had prospered on the northern sheep runs; he returned to England in 1864, revisiting the colony in 1869. Andrée was educated at Rugby School and matriculated to Exeter College, Oxford, in 1885 (B.A., 1888). He was called to the Bar of the Inner Temple in 1890. After working in South Africa he moved to the Western Australian goldfields in 1894. . . .

			From the British Medical Journal of 14 Jul 1894 p106 in a section with obituaries: JOHN BROCKWELL, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.EDIN. WE record with much regret the sudden death of Mr. Brockwell on June 25th, at Buxton, where he was staying for the benefit of his health. The cause of death was angina pectoris. Mr. Brockwell had not been in good health for a year past, and had suffered from acute gouty neuralgia. He had been sent at different times to Ramsgate and Bath, and had each time come back to his practice at Norwood, relieved by the rest and change. He at first derived benefit from his stay at Buxton, but after breakfast on the day of his death sank into a condition of syncope, which lasted only a few hours before it ended fatally. He was a native of Sturry, Kent; was educated at King's School, Canterbury, and at Guy's Hospital, London. He became M.R.C.S.Eng. in 1863, and L.R.C.P.Edin. in 1864. He first practised at Cleator, Cumberland, and in 1870 removed to Gipsy Hill, Upper Norwood, where he joined Dr. Allan Duke in partnership. He was genial, sympathetic, versatile, and, above all, hospitable; and these characteristics, added to a wide knowledge of practical medicine, ensured his success as a practitioner. He enjoyed the regard of numberless friends, to whom his death occasioned the greatest sorrow. He was one of the surgeons to the Norwood Cottage Hospital, Medical Officer to the Upper Norwood Dispensary, the Post-office (Norwood District), Oddfellows, and Foresters; and was always interested in all local public questions which tended to the well-being of his neighbours. He married in 1865, and has left his widow and a large family to mourn their loss. At his funeral on June 29th there was a wide gathering of friends and acquaintance, and the public manifestations of sorrow at his decease were everywhere apparent. In the 1911 census at 18 Lunham Road, Upper Norwood, London SE: Ada Mary Brockwell, aged 44, single, daughter, teacher, born at Cleator Moor, Cumberland, Hubert Westmacott Green, aged 37, married, son-in-law, district secretary of SC assos., born at Surat, India, Sara
