Introduction

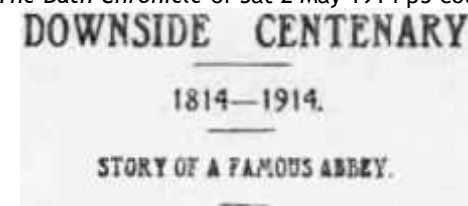

The abbey church from the east

From The Bath Chronicle of Thu 9 Oct 1873 p5 col f:
ST. GREGORY'S COLLEGE, DOWNSIDE.— Yesterday week the foundation stones of the new church and collegiate and monastic buildings were laid amidst much ceremonial. Archbishop Manning presided the ceremony, and he was accompanied by Bishop Clifford, Clifton, the Bishop of Newport and Menevia, the Cistercian Abbot of Mount St. Bernard's, Leicestershire, Monsignor Capel, Monsignor Parfitt, Dr. Neve, the Vicar-General of the Diocese, Dr. Williams, President of Prior Park College, and among the Benedictine clergy, to which Order Downside belongs, was the Very Rev. Dr. Sweeney, of Bath. The ceremony commenced with Pontifical High Mass, celebrated Dr. Clifford. After the Gospel the Archbishop preached, taking his text, "One body and one spirit," Eph. iv., 4. After Mass, the music of which was strict Gregorian, a procession was formed and moved through the grounds the college to the spot where the stones to be laid were prepared. The chief stone, forming the base of the north transept of the church, was laid by Archbishop Manning; the stone of the college by the Bishop of Clifton, and that of the monastery by the Bishop of Newport. At the end of the ceremony about £100 were laid upon the stone, but in addition to that the promises of contributions were very liberal. At the conclusion of the religious part of the day's proceedings the Benedictine Fathers entertained the visitors, numbering about 200, a luncheon laid out in the exhibition room of the college. The style of the new building, the architects of which are Messrs. Dunn and Hansom, of Newcastle, is mediaeval Gothic. The church, it is said, will be exceptionally grand, and with its lofty tower and spire will be a striking object to all in the neighbourhood. The building is to be constructed of stone from the neighbouring quarries at Doulting, which it may be mentioned furnished the material of the structure of Wells Cathedral and Glastonbury Abbey. The present Benedictine community purchased about 70 acres of land at Downside the year 1814, and removed thither from Acton Burnell Shropshire. By degrees they have increased their property to some 350 acres, and are known to have the best cultivated farms in their part of county of Somerset.

From The Bath Chronicle of Sat 2 May 1914 p5 col f:

Thursday. April 30th, marked the Centenary of the settlement at Gregory's School Downside, near Bath. Various functions are to be held to celebrate this interesting event. On the actual centenary day there was a High Mass of thanksgiving with Te Deum. At Whitsuntide there will be a gathering of old Downside boys at the Abbey; on July 1st a centenary celebration dinner will be held in London, at which Cardinal Bourne has promised to be present; on July 30th there will be High Mass at Downside, at which the Bishop of Clifton (Dr. G. A. Burton) will preach and on July 31st, solemn Requiem Mass will be sung for deceased "Gregorians and Benefactors." Thus the Centenary will be observed with befitting dignity.

St. Gregory's School, which has always been attached to St. Gregory's Monastery, had its first home at Douay. After their departure from Douay during the French Revolution, the community of St. Gregory's became housed at Acton Burnell Hall, this shelter having been offered the Smythe family. As strange coincidence Acton Burnell Hall was burned down a few weeks ago. The community was at Acton Burnell from 1795 to 1814, when the migration took place for Downside. Sir Edward Smythe who had been such a great benefactor the community, from the time of their expulsion from France died 1811, and his death made it imperative for another place of settlement to be obtained. In Henry N. Birt's comprehensive history of Downside, published some years ago it is recorded that Prior Kendal, who, at the demise of Dom Jerome Sharrock in 1808, had been intrusted with the Government of St. Gregory's, lost no time in writing to his friend, Bishop Collingridge, O.S.F., Vicar-Apostolic the western district, with the hope of securing a settlement within the limits his jurisdiction. Father Eldridge wrote to Dom Lerymer, who was also looking for an eligible site: "With you we think that Somersetshire possesses many advantages. However, we tie ourselves down to no particular county. The situation that shall possess the most permanent advantages is the one we shall fix upon." It is interesting to observe that before Downside was secured a site in the Isle of Wight was considered, while thoughts had been entertained of Challow House, Berkshire. Eventually the choice fell upon Downside, in the village of Stratton-on-the-Fosse, and on April 30th, 1814, the community at Downside and the history of St. Gregory's entered upon a new era. Here for one hundred years Gregorians have been housed and much has happened in that period. The development has been marked and the keynote has been progress, with the result that to-day Downside Abbey, with its school buildings, are among some of the architectural gems in a county so richly possessed of magnificent structures. There are now at Downside about 200 boys and the numbers have been steadily increasing during the last few years. It is an educational seminary which holds a foremost place amongst the Catholics of England. From the time that possession was taken of "Manor House" in 1814 great extensions and enlargements have taken place. The transepts of the Abbey, the tower of which still remains unfinished, were opened in 1862 while the opening of the choir and Sanctuary of the Abbey Church were opened in 1906. The elevation of Downside to the dignity of an Abbey is referred by Dom Birt as follows: "The Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII, as mark of his esteem for the venerable English Benedictine congregation, and a sign of his appreciation of the work done by it in the past, graciously deigned, propria motu, to raise the three ancient houses St. Gregory's, St. Lawrence's, and St. Edmund's the rank and dignity of Abbeys, with all the rights and privileges thereto pertaining, by a bull dated June 29th, 1899."

The blessing of the lady chapel took place on the feast St. Benedict in July. 1888, by Cardinal Vaughan.

The school premises have been very considerably enlarged of recent years and in May, 1912. Cardinal Bourne visited Downside for the purpose of formally opening the new schools. Anyone who was privileged to be present this function will not readily forget its impressiveness for the ceremony was performed with all the beauty and the dignity of the ornate ritual of the Catholic Church.

The eighties were eventful times for Downside and Dom Birt pens the following: "At the time of the Parliamentary general elections held the autumn of 1885, riots took place at Radstock and were expected to break out at Midsomer Norton on polling day. A large force of police was drafted into Norton, showing that the district authorities entertained grave fears for the public peace. As dire threats of special vengeance at the expense of the "---- papists" had been made, every precaution dictated by prudence was taken against any attempted attack by rioters; for, infuriated as they were by strong partisan feeling, it was feared that perhaps some of the more violent of the "free and independent electors" might attack the monastery and school. The stained-glass windows of the church were therefore either boarded up or shrouded with tarpaulins, for there happened to a great heap of stones ready broken for road-mending purposes, which would have come in handy for window-smashing. Twenty "special constables" were sworn in, including employees, lay masters, and stalwart sixth-form boys. This force undertook the preservation of peace and property throughout Stratton. Every "man" was armed with a truncheon. The corps was drilled and instructed in approved police tactics for such mob emergencies, and was divided into three sections, which relieved one another the duty of night patrolling. An officer in charge of each section visited the patrols, "communicating circumstances," while a mounted messenger was stationed in Norton ready to bring the first tidings of the advance of the rioters. The fire-engine was kept in readiness to pour water on man or flame. In case of attack, the reserve, consisting of the monks and picked boys, was to be called out by the tolling of the great bell. Our preparations for giving the rioters a warm reception got wind, and with commendable discretion they refrained from trying conclusions with us, though it is said they had gathered for the purpose to the number two or three hundred. The affair fizzled out like damp squib; but the fear of attack was real and well-grounded, and the circumstances connected with it are worthy of record, and might furnish a

Thackeray with the subject of an epic poem."

From 1878 1885 Aidan Gasquet, who has been recently made a Cardinal, was headmaster of the School and Prior of St. Gregory's Monastery. The first Abbot of Downside, Edmund Ford, who was prior and headmaster from 1885 to 1888 (became prior again in 1894) was elected in 1910 and the second and present Abbot is the Right Rev. Cuthbert Butler.

In 2020, the monastic community of Downside Abbey was home to fifteen monks when the monastic community announced that it would move away from the present monastery and seek a new place to live. On 27 Oct 2021, the monastic community further announced - and it was reported in many newspapers - that as part of their transition they would move in Spring 2022 to the temporary accommodation of Southgate House, in the grounds of Buckfast Abbey, another Benedictine establishment. They left in early March 2022.

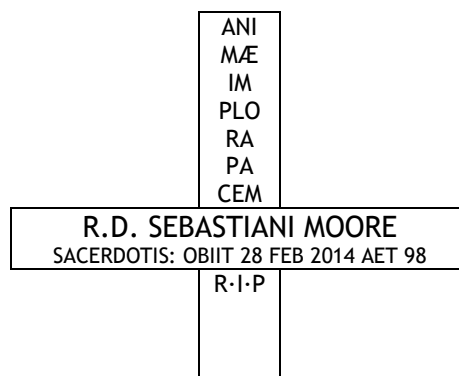

Memorials

The memorials are now standard as a black cast iron cross with raised letters coloured gold.

The inscriptions take the following form:

The forenames are in Latin and in the genitive case. For the monks, the forename is that of the saint's name adopted when entering the order, which may or, more likely, may not correspond with forenames given at birth.

St Benedict's has three headstones which were originally at St Gregory's as implied by inscriptions on their western faces. They were re-used for memorials to nuns. These western-facing inscriptions date from 1844, 1902 and 1905.

In Row 7 are memorials to a pilot in the Fleet Air Arm and ten pupils. On 15 May 1943 a Sea Hurricane based at Yeovilton crashed on Downside Abbey's cricket field during a practice low-flying attack and the pilot as well as schoolboys were killed.

Burial Registers

It is unclear whether or not a burial register exists. If it does it would be expected to take the form of the liber defunctorum used at Bath for St John the Evangelist's cemetery at Perrymead.

The records of burials used here come from a list of burials, possibly just memorials, produced by volunteers which was provided by Steven Parsons, Abbey Outreach Officer. This has names, plot numbers and years of burial. It deals solely with the burial ground.

Other Information

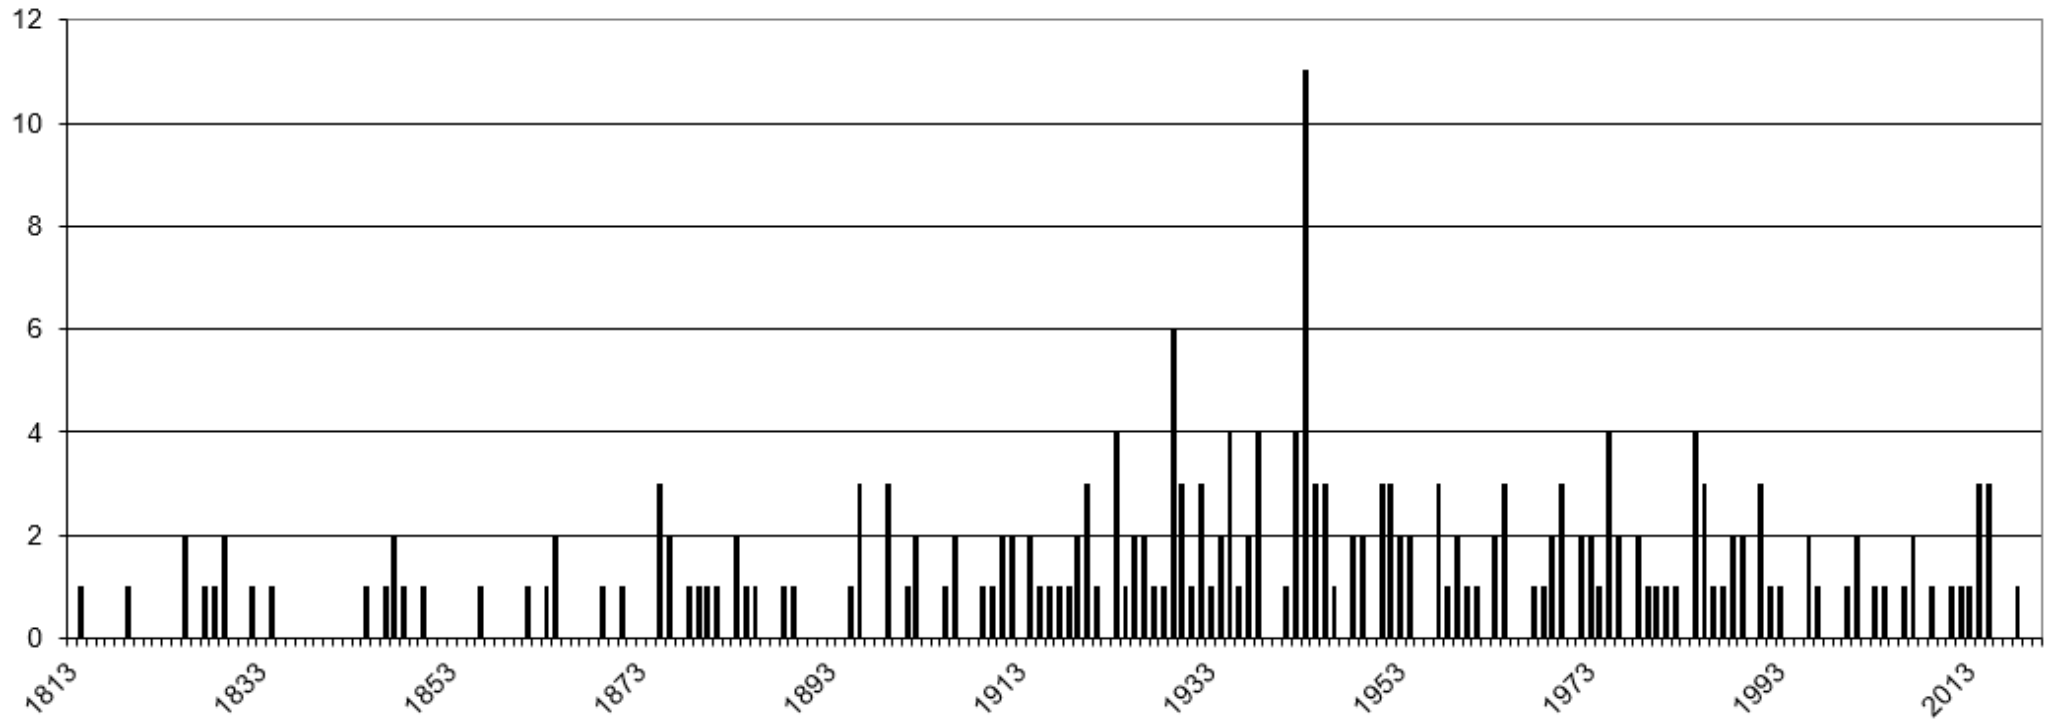

There is a twitter account for Downside Heritage at <https://twitter.com/downsidekeeper>

The Downside Abbey Guidebook contains a plan of the church showing the locations of the burials inside the church as well as the various side-chapels.

Downside Abbey –An Architectural History edited by Dom Aidan Bellinger.

Findagrave has information on 68 individuals buried at Downside Abbey. While there is a picture of the main burial ground, it does not document these memorials systematically.

Number of burials per year

Layout

This document divides the burials into four sections:

- A the main burial ground 72' wide and 97' long with a double gate on the northern side. It is bordered on four sides by a hedge. It has 8 rows of memorials, the separation between memorials being 3'6". There are 201 memorials.
- B an additional burial ground east of the sacristy with 4 memorials
- C the abbey church which has a number of burials, some with effigies, as well as wall plaques.
- D the undercroft of the Lady Chapel

Burial Ground

The main burial ground is 72' wide and 97' long. It is surrounded by a hedge 2'6" wide. There are currently eight rows of memorials, The offsets from the eastern side are: 1', 8', 15', 29', 39', 57', 66' and 72', the memorials in the westernmost row being right by the hedge. There is double gate 5'6" wide which starts 39' from the eastern side.

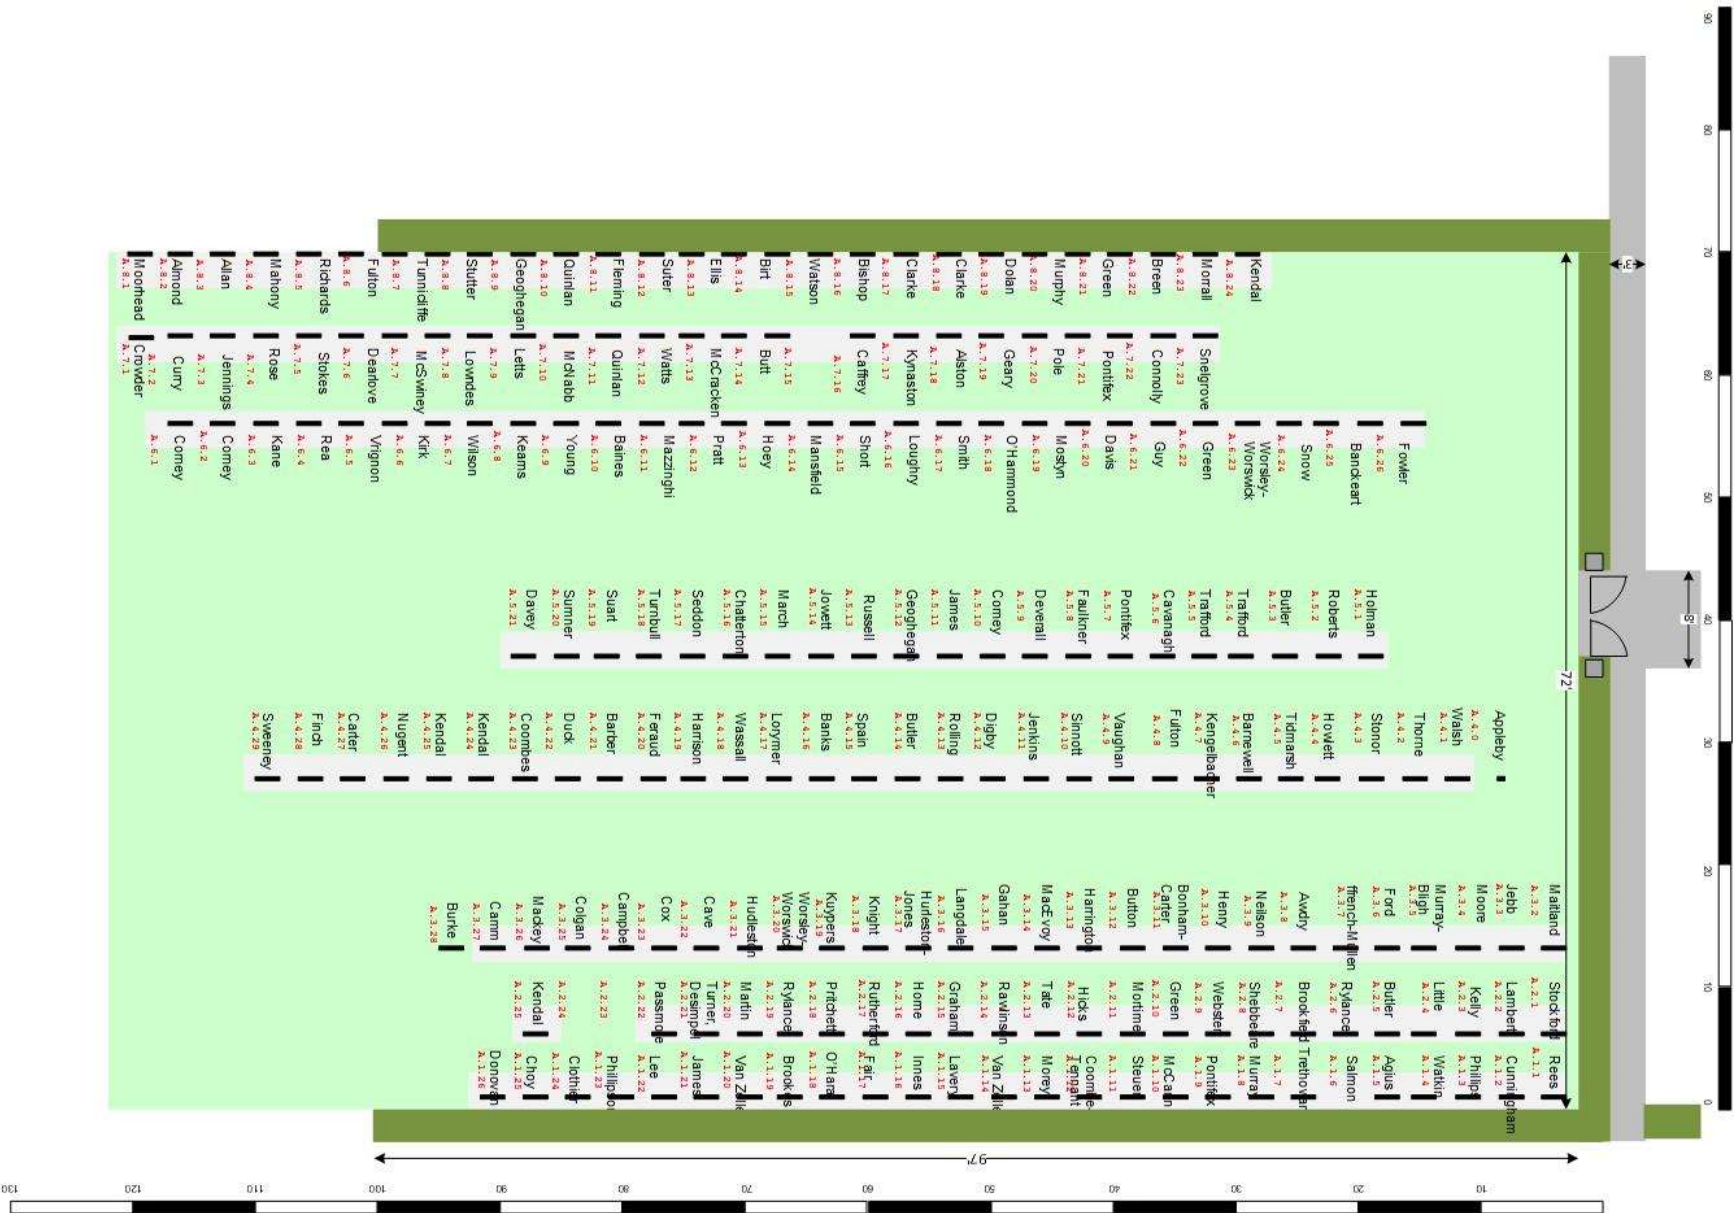

The metal memorials are 2' wide and the distance between the centres of adjacent memorials is 3'6". The gravel areas by the memorials are 3' wide.

There is a tarmac path 8' wide running north-south leading to the gates. Another path outside the northern hedge runs east-west is made of flagstones and is 3' wide.

Although arranged in a grid, the memorials are not quite aligned between rows.

For rows 1-5, the numbers of the plots ascend going from north to south. This is reversed for rows 6-8.

He went to Worth (then evacuated to Downside) in 1944 and proceeded to the senior school in 1949. He was an outstanding schoolboy. He was head of the school and was awarded the Gregorian Medal. . . . He entered the monastery, just eighteen years old, and was clothed with four others on 26 September 1954 by Abbot Christopher Butler. Dom Columba Thorne, now aged ninety-eight, remains in the community and Brian Butler, another contemporary, is with us today. He made his Solemn Profession in 1958 and was ordained priest on 31 July 1960 by Bishop Rudderham of Clifton. His chalice, which he used at his first Mass and is now on his coffin, contains his mother's engagement ring. His mother died when Father Ambrose was thirteen. The obituary gives an account of his life including studying in Rome, Brussels, Cambridge and Durham, his role as Geography teacher and as priest at Radstock.

Names	Inscriptions	Notes
		From an obituary by Dr Kate Sotejeff-Wilson: Theologian and poet Dom Sebastian Moore died on 28th February 2014, in his 96th year and the 75th year of his monastic profession. Born in India on 21st December 1917, but growing up in England from the age of one, he attended Downside School and spent three years in the navy at his father's insistence before becoming a Benedictine. He wrote every day and always shared his reflections with others: copies of his latest collection of sonnets, Remembered Bliss (Lapwing Publications: 2014), arrived at Downside on the morning he died. In it, he told the reader, "I'm ninety-six, and for most of my life I've been a monk. My life as a monk has been, for the most part, the search for God as real." ... There was an obituary in the Daily Telegraph of 20 Apr 2014 which refers to him being born at Madras in 1917, son of a chief of police, attending Downside School and a four year stint in the Royal Navy before joining the monastery, studying English at Christ's College, Cambridge, a doctorate in theology at St Anselmo's, Rome and parish priest in Liverpool.

		From The Sunday Telegraph of 30 Aug 2015: Dom Columba Thorne, who has died aged 101, was a monk at Downside who, during the war, dispensed vital moral and medical aid as an Anglican chaplain at the ill-fated Arnhem operation in September 1944. After landing by glider in a potato field, Acting Captain the Reverend Selwyn Thorne slept his first night in a ditch, then helped to set up a first-aid post in the parsonage of a Calvinist church, outside the Dutch village of Oosterbeck. The bespectacled padre, still dapper in his dog collar, conducted burials at dawn and calmly took on the role of the doctor's right-hand man. When a shell narrowly missed Thorne, he was too busy to feel fear, but recalled later how he had wished that God would stop the noise. Captured by the Germans, he was imprisoned at Stalag XI-B at Fallingbommel, near Hanover, for six months. On arriving back in England, Thorne obtained six weeks' leave, and visited his mother. He then went down to Downside, where Abbot Siegbert Trafford genially greeted him: "Are they looking after you? Stay as long as you like." Dom Columba Thorne, March 1 1914, died August 24 2015.

		The long illness of the Very Rev. Jerome Vaughan has ended fatally. He was 55 years old, and educated at the Downside School, St. Michael's Priory, Belmont, and Rome. After some experience as professor at Belmont, he founded the Abbey of Fort Augustus, of which he became the first prior. After an interval passed in Italy and Ramsgate, he began work at St. Peter's Priory, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, during the episcopate of his brother, present Cardinal. In view of his failing health, he was advised to make a voyage to the Antipodes. Even when thus seeking to regain lost strength, he could not refrain from arduous exertions for the furtherance of the Gregorian Mission. He only returned to Manchester about a month ago. He had an apoplectic seizure on Sunday, and died on Wednesday morning, his brother, Colonel Vaughan and the Prior of Downside being with him to the end. He is to be buried at St. Gregory's Monastery, Downside, on Monday, when Cardinal Vaughan and his brothers are to be present.

A.4.11	Jerome Jenkins (1796-1878)	RR·DD·HIERONYMI·JENKINS SAC·ABBATIS·OBIIT DIE 24 JUL·1878:ÆT·82.	 From The Tablet of Sat 3 Aug 1878 p19 DEATH OF THE RIGHT REV. ABBOT JENKINS, O.S.B.—In the person of the venerable Father, whose name heads this little tribute to his memory, the English Benedictine Congregation has lost one of its patriarchs, and under circumstances of unusual interest. The quadrennial Chapter of the Congregation opened at St. Laurence's monastery at Ampleforth on Wednesday, July 17th, and F. Jenkins, who held the second place in the Order in England, as First Definitor or Consultor to the President-General, and also Abbot of St. Alban's, arrived at the monastery on the previous day to fulfil his duty in attending its sittings. He was eighty-two years of age, and might well plead cause of absence, but his love for his brethren was paramount, and in spite of the gentle remonstrances of his friends, he journeyed from Coventry, where he had been residing with his brethren at Osburg's Priory, and attended the first sittings of the Chapter. The great heat, which was a trial to more robust constitutions, proved, in addition to the ordinary fatigues of the Chapter, too much for his infirm state. He had said Mass each day until the Sunday, and on that evening it was evident to his brethren that there was cause for alarm. He was seized with difficulty of breathing and was induced next day to keep his bed. On Tuesday evening it was found necessary to administer the last Sacraments, and when it was announced to him that this holy duty was to be performed, he lifted up his hands and eyes towards heaven and said the prayer which each day he had said at the Offertory of the Mass: "In spiritu humilitatis et animo contrito suscipiamur a Te Domine, et sic fiat sacrificium nostrum in conspectu Tuo, ut placeat Tibi Omnipotens Deus." The Blessed Sacrament was brought in procession from the church to his cell, and he most devotedly received the Viaticum and Extreme Unction, surrounded by his brethren. During the night he

		edified the brothers who were watching by his side by his continual prayers and aspirations. Early in the morning he pointed to a picture of our Divine Lord surrounded by His disciples, and said to those about him, " He will have two more disciples with Him to-day, Father Poole and myself," alluding to a good Benedictine missionary who died also during Chapter, though not in the monastery. At 7.30, just when many Masses were going on, he calmly breathed his last, having shortly before received the Apostolical Blessing. What St. Gregory said of our holy father St. Benedict was truly verified, we may hope, of this good abbot, "Inter verba orationis expiravit, et ab angelis susceptus est." F. Jenkins was professed so far back as the days when the Community, now so flourishing at Downside, was still at Acton Burnell. He held many offices of dignity and importance in the English Benedictine Congregation. He had been Provincial at Canterbury, Procurator in Rome, and up to the time of his death was first Definitor, or Consultor, to the President-General, and was Abbot of St. Albans. The body was removed to Downside, the house of his profession and his constant love, where a solemn Requiem will be celebrated at the time of the Month's Mind, when more of his brethren can be gathered together. For some years past Father Jenkins had resided at Coventry, and there the news of his death was a cause of great grief. The people thronged to the church to attend the Requiem, which was there celebrated on the Monday after his demise. R.I.P. In the 1871 census at Hill Street, Coventry: Thos Cuthbert Smith, aged 55, Roman Cath priest, St Osburg's church, born at Preston (Lancs) John Jenkins, aged 74, Roman Cath priest, born at Sedgeley (Staffs), Hy Edmund Moore, aged 46, Roman Cath priest St Osburg's church, born at Irnham (Lincs), Antonio Pereira, aged 32, Roman Cath pries St Osburg's church, born at Calcutta, India, and two servants. The death of John Jenkins, aged 82, was registered 1878/Q3 Helmsley.

		From a description of the Downside Connection to Belmont Abbey, Hereford by Dom Bernard (Paul) Wassall (-2020): In the 1950's, when Belmont was going through a difficult period, a monk of Downside, Dom Nicholas Holman, was sent to Belmont for a number of years to help out. He later did the same for Fort Augustus Abbey, Scotland, and was elected Abbot there. After retiring he went as chaplain to the Tyburn community at Wadhurst, which later moved to Ireland. The ceremonial of Downside was followed here at Belmont for many years. It can be seen that Belmont owes a great debt to Downside Abbey.

Up and down the country meetings were held, turgid oratory over-flowed, and bigotry obstinately resisted a growing sense of justice. . . . The act provided for the extinction of religious orders ; individuals in England at the time could obtain protection from penalties by registering their names and status, but for the future every profession would be a felony, and those who took vows and their abettors were liable to be punished as felons. Downside, in common with other establishments, was filled with dismay and consternation : it seemed to be doomed to fresh persecution and proscription with little hope of escape, for the rest of Catholics remained too thankful for their own measure of relief . . . The Act passed, professions took place at Downside as hitherto in private, and no one proposed to exact the provisions of the Act : the clause was still-born. It was thought advisable to register the community, and in the archives may be found certificates of registration of Ralph Pratt, John Folding, Luke Barber, Nicholas Rea, John Spencer, Joseph Short and John Rigby. Thus another storm passed over the monastery at the dawn with much thunder and threatening, but nobody seems one penny the worse. In the 1851 census at Downside: Nicholas Rea, aged 45, unmarried, house servant, born in Ireland. The death of Nicholas Rea, aged 70, was registered 1876/Q1 Clutton.

He was also music master to the Princess of Wales, afterwards Queen Caroline. Visiting Italy in 1834, he recovered the title of count, a papal distinction. On his return to England he retired to Bath. He died on 15 Jan 1844, at Downside College, where he had been on a visit to his son.

		He was buried in Chelsea. According to the death notice in the Morning Herald of Thu 18 Jan 1844 p7, he was aged 79. From The Globe, Thu 18 Jan, 1844 p2: DEATH OF COUNT MAZZINGHI.— This eminent musician and composer died on the 15th inst. aged seventy-nine, at Downside College, near Bath, where he had gone to visit his only son. Joseph Mazinghi (who was descended from an ancient Corsican family) was born in London, his father being established as a merchant here. At the age of nineteen Mazingbi was appointed director of music the Italian Opera. While holding this appointment composed several very popular ballets, among which were “Paul Virginie,” “Sappho et Phaon,” and, in after years, hee composed several very successful operas for Covent-garden and Drury-lane theatres, such as “Chains of the Heart,” “The Blind Girl,” “Free Knights,” “Ramah Droog,” “Turnpike Gate,” “Wife of Two Husbands,” &c. When the Opera House was burnt down, in 1789, the score and all the music of opera, by Poesiello, called “La Locando,” were destroyed; but Mazinghi wrote from memory new set of parts for the orchestra, which gained for him infinite credit. In 1834 Mr. Mazingbi went to Italy, and recovered the title of his ancestors. remained Florence for some years; then returned to end his days in the land that gave him birth. Having been member of the Royal Society of Musicians since the year 1787 (now 57 years), on recovering the honours of his family he presented handsome donation to that institution, and requested that his name might be continued on the list of members, as “Joseph Mazingni,” for he felt a pleasure in being numbered among his old associates. The Count was very accomplished and gentlemanly, and kind towards his professional brethren, and was much esteemed in general society, including that of the highest rank. He was constant visitor at Carlton House when bis Majesty George the Fourth was Prince of Wales, and welcome guest at the mansions of the principal nobility. The Count Mazinghi was twice married—first, to a daughter of the late Leopoldo de Michele,

When purchasing his ticket for Lusitania, Clarke asked if there was any danger and was told that there was none. Clarke's ticket was 46062 and his cabin was D-12. Clarke became friendly with Staff Captain Anderson who told him early in the voyage that six boilers were not in use and that the ship's speed would be reduced. He had lunch with Father Basil Maturin on the day of the disaster and they parted ways. Clark then went up the lift and through the smoking room to stand outside the verandah café. He was talking to an American when the ship was struck. Clarke made his way downstairs to D deck where his cabin was located. He came up on the port side and found chaos and so returned to starboard. While there, he waited for a few minutes and then entered lifeboat #11. Reverend Charles Clarke died on 14 January 1916. From The Bath Chronicle of Sat 8 Jan 1916 p1: CLARKE.—On the 4th inst., at a nursing home in Bath, the Rev. Charles Cowley Clarke, of Brighton. From Clifton Society of Thu 13 Jan 1916 p9: The funeral took place at Downside Abbey, on Saturday, of the Rev. Charles Cowley Clarke, a Roman Catholic priest, of Brighton. He came to Bath in the latter part of November to go into a nursing home, in which he died on the 4th inst. Deceased had for a considerable time suffered from an internal growth, and while in a weak state of health he was on the ill-fated "Lusitania," when this liner was torpedoed off the south coast of Ireland. He was in the water a long time, and was eventually rescued in an exhausted condition. He suffered severely from the shock; Indeed, it was amazing that he survived his ordeal: but the experience undoubtedly hastened his end. The funeral arrangements at Bath and at Downside were in the hands of Jolly's (Ltd), Bath.

		Peter Augustine Baines (1787-1843), OSB, was Vicar-Apostolic of the Western Region of England and bought Prior Park for a school and a seminary in Dec 1829. See Post-Reformation Catholicism in Bath Volume 1 ed. J. Anthony Williams, Catholic Record Society, 1975. There is also an entry for him in The Catholic Encyclopedia. The Bath Chronicle of Thu 13 Jul 1843 p4 reported on the inquest which came to the verdict of "Died by the visitation of God". The article also had: The body lay in state the entrance-hall at Prior Park on Tuesday and yesterday- The daylight was excluded, the hall being lit by large wax-lights. The coffin was covered with black velvet, overshadowed by a dark canopy of the same material. On the lid of the coffin was a mantle of gold brocade, with the mitre, episcopal hat, chalice and crosier (the latter profusely studded with gems). At the head of the corpse was the chair of the deceased, slightly raised, and surmounted by a violet-coloured canopy, trimmed with black crape. In front of the chair lay a missal or breviary, and on either side a crosier and crucifix, of costly material and workmanship. An elegant alabaster vase, bound with crape, on a massive marble pillar, stood on each side of the seat, in which, and around it, were the various vestments, &c, appertaining to the office of the departed. At intervals, ten ecclesiastics, five ranged on each side of the coffin, assisted by several choristers, chanted or read the Latin services set apart by their Church for such an occasion. The ceremony was witnessed by large numbers of the inhabitants of Bath. The interment has been fixed for to-day (Thursday), and will take place in the Private Chapel of the College. The original burial on 13 Jul 1843 was in Prior Park's chapel. When Prior Park was sold in 1856, the bodies of those buried there were reburied in different places, some at the chapel of St Mary the Immaculate at Midford Castle. Bishop Baines' coffin was reburied at Downside in 1909.

Braga: Portugal was one of the first countries to be represented by a Consulate in Hongkong, the first Portuguese consul being appointed as early as the year 1846. He was Mr. Francisco José da Paiva, a prominent merchant of Macao, who transferred his business to Hongkong. Mr. Paiva died in 1849, and his successor in business was appointed Portuguese Consul in his place. Incidentally, Mr. Paiva's name is perpetuated in Macao by the street named after him - Travessa do Paiva, off Praia Grande, just beside Government House- and the family residences, at the top of the same street, are among the very few remaining houses of the old merchant princes of Macao's prosperous days at the beginning of the XIXth century. From The Atlas of Sat 24 Jan 1857 p13:

		good Pereira family, which is said to have been especially blessed by St. Francis Xavier. Certainly an exceptional blessing seems to have attended this good and faithful monk. Those who have known Downside for the last twenty years or more, will ever remember the simple innocent cheerful-hearted student, the strictly-obedient happy novice, the earnest and devoted religious, the recollected priest, and hard-working master, which in various positions Father Placid had ever proved himself to be. He went to Downside at an early age, and the dearest earthy wish of his heart was that he might never leave the home of his education and religious profession. His wish was granted; for it was in the midst of his brethren that he died most happily after a long lingering consumptive illness, which in his case could scarcely be called painful, so perfectly did his patience conceal every sign of pain. He was buried in the conventual cemetery by the side of the late Bishop Morris, with the impressive solemnity attendant upon the Benedictine ritual. The Prior of Downside, Dom Bernard Murphy, who had been almost the life-long companion of the deceased, at the end of the Mass, addressed a few words before the body was removed to the grave. "Well done thou good and faithful servant," &c., was the Prior's appropriate text, and in affectionate words which well became a superior speaking of a most deserving subject, and a friend of a most devoted friend, he dwelt upon the one most distinguishing feature of his long loved brother, which was fidelity to duty. Besides the community there attended Father Gallwey, Prov. S.J., the Hon. and Rev. W. Petre, the Revv. Dom Peter Wilson, Dr. Sweeney, Dom B. Tidmarsh, who sang the Mass, J. Davis, E. Guy, J. Brown, B. Bulbeck, &c., who had been superiors or companions of the good, faithful, deceased monk, and who came to do the last duty towards one who had so well deserved their affection and esteem. Per Jesu Domine, dona ei requiem. From St James's Gazette of Wed 10 Dec 1884 p15: DE PAIVA Aurelia O., widow of Francisco José, of Macao, at Gloucester-street, Portman-square, Dec 6. From the National Probate Calendar 1885: 16 January. DE PAIVA.- On Friday, the 12th inst., the Benedictine community of St. Gregory's bore to the grave the body of an old and true friend and generous benefactor. This was Madame de Paiva, the widow of a former Portuguese official at Macao, a lady well-known among Catholics in London, who died after a very short illness on Saturday, the 6th inst. She had already prepared for herself a tomb, for by her generosity the Lady chapel of the new monastic church is to be built, and beneath the floor of what will be the undercroft of this chapel, she and several of her family, among them a son, Dom Placid de Paiva, a priest of the Downside community, lie buried. The body of the revered lady was brought from London after the celebration of an Office and Solemn Requiem at the chapel in Spanish-place, and, at half-past ten on Friday a Requiem was chaunted by the community at Downside. The celebrant was Dom Ambrose Pereira, of Coventry, formerly in the community of St. Gregory's, and the Rev. Ignatius O'Gorman, S.J., assisted as sub-deacon, both of them being nephews of the deceased. A funeral discourse was preached by the Very Rev. Prior of Downside. He spoke of the debt of gratitude Downside owed to the deceased lady, praised the faith, piety, and charity which had adorned her life, and said that it was a sufficient panegyric of her to say that she was the mother of Father Placid, a monk who had shown in his life a rare spirit of duty and monastic zeal. By a strange coincidence, Madame de Paiva was buried on the eleventh anniversary of this son's death at Downside,

		From the Western Morning News of Thu 12 Sep 1935 p8:  FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT. BATH, Wednesday. Cardinal Justinian Seredi, Prince Primate Hungary, Archbishop of Esztergom, arrived by motor-car at Downside Abbey, near Bath, to-night in preparation for the consecration ceremony, which he is to perform at the abbey to-morrow. At the west door of the new building he was received with all the colourful ritual of the Roman Catholic Church. "Great Bede," the principal bell of the abbey, pealed in welcome when the Cardinal's car swept along the drive, and as he stepped from the vehicle he was met the Abbot (Rt. Rev. G. Bruno Hicks), wearing a cope of cloth of gold over a lace cotta, and mitre. As a background to this scene stood a semi-circle of Archbishops and Bishops, and monks from Downside. MONASTERY'S ACHIEVEMENT. First the Cardinal knelt and kissed the Crucifix presented to him by the Abbot. Then, taking up the holy "water brush handed to him, he sprinkled the kneeling figures around him. Afterwards all the clergy passed in procession into the Abbey. At the short service within the Abbey the Abbot read an address of welcome. The Cardinal, replying in Latin, congratulated the monastery on

Numerous newspapers throughout the land reported on the consecration. Several reported that the Bishop of Clifton had referred to the church as ‘the new Glastonbury’ and that the stone for the altar had come from Glastonbury Abbey. It was also noted that there was a coincidence in the singing of the Psalm of Ethiopia ‘considering the present international situation’. There were some pictures of the event on the front and back pages of the Bath Weekly Chronicle and Herald of Sat 14 Sep.
