Introduction

Figure 1

The church of St Michael has undergone a series of transformations from the original small Norman one, its replacement in 1814 with a larger structure, followed by a new church in 1865 and the addition of a northern aisle in 1881.

In February 1864 there was an advertisement inviting builders to tender for the 'altering and enlarging the church at Monkton Combe, near Bath'. In the Bath Chronicle of Thu 5 May 1864 p8 a notice outlined the plans to increase the number of sittings from 95 to 250 by enlarging the existing church, rebuilding the tower and adding a new aisle. This also specified that the cost would be £1000 and gave a list of subscriptions amounting to over £400 that had already been received.

During 1865 the Bath Chronicle had various advertisements for events for the 'Monkton Combe Church Building Fund' including bazaars and lectures. From the Bath Chronicle of Thu 29 Jun 1865 p7:

MONKTON COMBE.—The church in this village having been found too small for the accommodation of the increased and increasing number of worshippers, the incumbent, the Rev. F. Pocock, acting upon the advice of Mr. Giles, the eminent architect, determined to take down the old fabric and to build an entirely new church, the expense being defrayed by voluntary subscriptions. The incumbent's stipend does not exceed £75 per annum, but so kindly and generously has he been supported that a large portion of the funds required has been already raised; still there remains a debt of £350 to be paid off before the incumbent will be relieved from the heavy responsibility he has so nobly took upon himself. The church, we see, is to be opened on Tuesday, 4th July, when sermons will be preached by Ven. The Archdeacon of Bath, and by the Right Rev. D. Anderson, late Bishop of Rupert's Land. After each sermon there will be a collection towards defraying the debt, and we earnestly hope that there will be liberal contributions from all who wish God speed to a faithful and zealous labourer in his Master's vineyard.

The church served both Monkton Combe and Combe Down. Holy Trinity Church, Combe Down, dates from 1832-5 but does not have its own graveyard. In the burial registers the abodes include 'Combe', 'Monkton Combe' and 'Combe Down' with a variety of spellings. It is only in the 1840s that designation of the abodes settles down to mainly either of 'Monkton Combe' and 'Combe Down'.

Very few ancient memorials exist. The Shute memorial in the church refers to the loss of memorials as a result of the rebuilding in 1865. Presumably the ledger stones inside the church were built over. There are only a few memorials for burials before 1850, the oldest ones a large memorial from 1812 and a slab for someone buried in 1829. Inside the church is a memorial made up of 4 blocks of stone to a husband and wife who died 1586 and 1593.

The memorial on one grave has an enigmatic reference to 'Senor Don Fink of Valencia in the Kingdom of Spain' who had erected the stone for his parents-in-law. Henry Fink, an engineer from Bristol, went to Valencia to drive the first steam train there and subsequently set up various businesses. A large altar tomb on the northern side of the church is for members of the Shute and Rothery families who drowned in a boating accident at Chepstow in 1812.

The church is now part of a joint benefice with Holy Trinity, Combe Down and St James, Southstoke.

Burial Registers

The burial registers prior to 1853 are at the Somerset Heritage Centre, Taunton, with microfiche copies of these at Bath Record Office. Up until now none of these have been indexed.

The registers prior to 1800 have limited value as it is only in exceptional cases that an age is included.

Layout

The graveyard is divided into arbitrary sections A-F. Sections A-C are north of the path that runs from the gate in Church lane, past the church westwards to the entrance in Tucking Mill Lane. Sections D-F are south of this path and east of the church.

Sections A, B, D and E, and most of section C are arranged on a grid aligned with the axis of the western section of the path. Section F is in two parts. That part south of the church is arranged parallel to the assumed orientation of the pre-1865 churches. The graves east of the church are aligned with the orientation of the 1865 church.

Part of Section C is now used for the burial of ashes.

Numbering

The numbering system for graves is that currently used in by the church's office. This scheme is based on numbering the memorials rather than the graves, although this is not consistent.

Some inscriptions are not longer accessible or illegible. In some cases names have been deduced from the index to memorials. For other inscriptions which just have, for example 'Father' or 'Baby', the names have been deduced from the accompanying date by reference to the burial register entries.

The following is from the Bath Chronicle of Thu 24 Sep 1812 p3: A most tragical event took place at Chepstow on Sunday last, which has plunged many families in this city and neighbourhood in the deepest distress. The particulars are as follow: A party, consisting of eight ladies and one gentleman *, accompanied by a man servant, who had been to church in the morning, had afterwards ridden to Tintern Abbey, and returned by water; it was perfectly calm, and a full moon: when they were about to land, the boatman informed them the best place was below the Bridge, which they were fast approaching, and where a number of ladies and gentlemen were walking. Before they entered the arch, one of the ladies (Mrs. Rothery, as we understand from the survivors) called out "there's a rope, there's a rope" but it was not seen by any other of the party, being in part under the surface of the water. In an instant all was horror! The moment the boat touched the rope, she upset! The cries of the unfortunate for assistance, the pushing off of boats from the shore, and the hurry of the good people who were anxious to save them, formed altogether a scene of inexpressible distress.— The wretched remains of this late happy party are Miss Eliza Shute, Miss Ann, and Mr. Rothery; the latter of whom had been twice carried down in supporting his wife, by struggling friends clinging to them, and checking his exertions: he at length got her to the head of the upset boat, but from one of the party again clinging to them, they both suddenly disappeared, and it was long before
