Introduction

The church of St Lawrence, Rode

From the Imperial Gazetteer of England and Wales 1870-72 by John Marius Wilson:

ROAD, a village, a parish, and a sub-district, in Frome district, Somerset. The village stands on the river Frome, at the boundary with Wilts, 4 miles N N E of Frome r. station; extends, beyond the boundary, into Wilts; was once a market-town; and has a post-office under Bath, a temperance hall, a mechanics' institute, and a large cheese fair on the Monday after 9 Sept. The parish comprises 928 acres. Rated property, £2,446. Pop., 663. Houses, 171. The property is much sub-divided. The manor belongs to Mrs. Jones. Merfield House is the seat of H. B. Pooll, Esq. Extensive woollen dye-works are at Shawford. The living is a rectory, united with the rectory of Woolverton, in the diocese of Bath and Wells. Value, £650.* Patron, J. B. Starky, Esq. The church was built about the beginning of the 15th century; and has a tower, with a railed battlement in one corner, called the King's Chair, and traditionally said to have been mounted by Charles II. for reconnoitering after the battle of Worcester. There are chapels for Baptists and Wesleyans, and a national school.—The sub-district contains also ten other parishes and an extra-parochial tract. Acres, 11, 348. Pop., 3, 573. Houses, 838

A history of the church of St Lawrence, Rode can be found at the website for the Hardington Vale Benefice which incorporates six parishes in the area. Until 1919 the spelling of the village's name was 'Road', thereafter 'Rode', although the latter spelling was sometimes used before this.

From the Wiltshire Times of Sat 24 May 1919 p5:
ROAD.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

In consequence of frequent vexatious delays, and sometimes loss, arising from the modern spelling of the name of Road, a public meeting, called by the Parish Council, and presided over by Mr. G. W. Stokes, was held at the Reading Room to consider the advisability of making a change in the spelling, as an outcome of which it was decided to write to the Somerset County Council in relation to the matter.

The Rev. R. Baker, of Tellisford, strongly supported the proposal for a change and told the audience that in looking back through the history of the district, he found that the name of the village was originally "Rode."

Parts of the village being in Wiltshire, the Wilts County Council will have to be approached on the matter.

From the Oxford University, City, and County Herald of Sat 2 Feb 1833 p1:

There was another wrong-headed old gentleman, of the name of Daubeny, who delighted to pull down churches, schools, and almshouses. His private fortune was totally swallowed up in enterprizes of this public nature: he pulled down Christ Church, at Bath; he pulled down Rode Church, in his own parish of Bradley. Not content with this, he pulled down a poor-house and an asylum, in the village of which he was incumbent. Twenty-two thousand pounds was the amount his exploits in this particular line were computed to have cost him.

The Daubeny in question was Charles Daubeny (1745-1827), Archdeacon of Sarum.

From The Annual Biography and Obituary for the Year 1827, Volumes 11 p59:

Possessed of extensive erudition, inflexible integrity, and sterling worth, Dr. Daubeny was, on royal suggestion, under three successive administrations, destined, as he was qualified, for the episcopal bench; yet, through intervening contingencies, the author of "The Guide to the Church" remained unrequited with prelacy. He completed an archdeaconal visitation the fortnight before his death; and he delivered an address to his congregation at Roade only forty-eight hours before his death; which took place on the 10th July, 1827.

In Religious Identities in Britain, 1660-1832 by Robert G. Ingram a chapter is dedicated to an appraisal of him. He built a poorhouse in the parish in 1817 and in 1822 started a new church for the parish, the foundation stone being laid in 1823 and completed in autumn 1824, Daubeny contributing nearly £4,000 to the cost.

An advertisement in the Frome Times of Wed 25 Sep 1872 p2 invited builders to tend for the re-erection of the chancel, the erection of two bays to the north aisle and some partial restoration of Road church. The person inviting the tenders was Charles E Davis of Bath ('Major Davis') who was the surveyor of works for the Corporation of Bath.

The Bath Chronicle reported in detail the eventual re-opening of the church (Bath Chronicle Thu 25 Jun 1874 p3 col a). This starts:

The ancient parish church of Road having been thoroughly and completely restored was re-opened last Thursday, by the Bishop of Bath and Wells. The work was commenced in October, 1872, under the auspices of the late venerable Rector, the Rev. Charles Glossop, who undertook the restoration of the chancel and the building of an organ chamber and vestry, but he did not live to see its successful completion. Presented to the living in 1811, he continued to hold it until April in the present year, when he died at the patriarchal age of ninety-one, and in the sixty-third year of his incumbency.

. . . . The church, which is dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a fine old building, and consists of a nave, two side aisle, chancel, and square embattled tower on the west, to which an aisle to the chancel, forming an organ chamber and vestry, has been added on the north side. The present church was built at the beginning of the sixteenth century, occupying the side of a much older though smaller building, of which several interesting remains were found during the progress of the restoration. The oldest part of the existing structure is supposed to have been built about 1470, the nave and north aisle being of later date. At the east end of the south aisle are the remains of a chantry chapel, but whose it was and to whom it was dedicated records and relics are silent. The same remark applied to a handsome tomb in the south-east corner. Above this are remains of mural decoration in which may be traced a figure of the Virgin, and fleurs-de-lis in gold on claret ground. A little to the right is a vacant niche, the ornamental parts of which have been cut away, but have now been restored from the traces left. There are also traces of colour on the wall, flaming stars and Catherine wheels in gold being easily discernible. Built into the wall beneath the tomb is a piscina, which has been restored to its proper position. The greater part of the stonework of this tomb is worked out of slabs from older tombs; the back part of one of the caps has a square fillet and large hollow moulding which at one time was gilded completely over and is apparently part of a jamb to some handsome erection. Immediately behind the arch and cornice of the tomb is a rougher arch, on the face of one of the stones of which is a part of a coloured representation of the Martyrdom of St. John in the cauldron of boiling oil. In the filling-in of the wall close by was found a piece of plastering bearing upon its surface a coloured presentation of the flowing hair and back of the head of a human figure; the ground was gilded and of beautiful colour and brightness though it must have lain where found some 300 years. The centre boss in the roof of this chapel has a hole through it, apparently to allow a lamp to be suspended therefrom. A plaster ceiling has been removed, and the very fine open timbered oak roof exposed to view; the wood is in excellent preservation, and the moulding where it has been cut away has been restored. At the west end the remains of a door formerly leading to the turret stairs were found. The windows were originally decorated; the tracery was subsequently cut away, and Perpendicular work substituted. That in turn getting out of repair was removed and its place taken by ugly square casements. The present restorers have wisely replaced the Perpendicular casements and filled them (as well as all the other windows) with cathedral glass. In the two-light window of this south aisle is a stone coloured blue on its top and sides were built into the wall and a chamfer coloured red is worked on its edges; a portion of the upper surface appears rough as though some carving had been chopped off. The stone now forms the top stone of the label and part of the head of the window. In 1770 the side walls of the nave were taken down below the level of the window sills of the clerestory and rebuilt, a new roof being also added from the designs of a Trowbridge architect, who being probably more familiar with domestic than Ecclesiastical architecture, instead of reproducing the old windows, inserted segmented headed lights which might have been copied from some factory. These have now been removed, and as in the course of the work portions of the original heads, jambs, and sills were discovered, the windows have been restored in accordance with the original design. . . .

The restoration has been carried out under the direction of Mr. Charles E. Davis, by Mr. Richard Mann of this city, and there can be but one opinion as to the manner in which the work has been done. While the original fabric has been disturbed as little as possible it has been materially strengthened, and the new work is remarkable no less for the faithfulness to the design of the original building than for the thoroughly substantial manner in which it is executed. The total cost of the works has been about £3,000, of which the late Rector gave about £1,200 (the cost of the chancel and aisle), the present Rector the new roof, and the remainder is raised by subscriptions. The churchwardens, Captain Arthur Noad, R.N., and Mr. Willis, of Shawford, have borne the responsibility of this portion of the work, and to the first named gentleman especially the parishioners are greatly indebted for his zealous endeavours to bring the undertaking to a successful issue. . . .

Most of the southern area of the churchyard was added from adjacent glebe land in the 1870s, as noted in the article on this church in "Church Rambler" (1878). (The church does not feature in the 1876 edition.) This has:

"The present Rector, as patron and curate started the scheme of restoration in 1870, prompted thereto by a gift of £50 from the Rev. Preb. Palaiet. . . . He added a piece of ground which was his property to the churchyard."

From Rev John Collinson's The History and Antiquities of the County of Somerset Vol II (1791) in a section on Road, after describing the ownership from the 1500s:

The church is dedicated to St. Laurence, and is composed of a nave and side aisles, with an embattled tower at the west end, containing six bells.

On the north side of the chancel is a stone to the memory of James Hillman, rector of this parish, who died Nov. 24, 1738, aged 53 years. There is likewise a memorial to John Hellierd, gent, who died Dec. 13, 1623, and to Nathaniel Hellierd, rector of Road, who died Nov. 20, 1650.

The annual number of christenings is forty; and of burials thirty-eight.

From Primitive Sun Dials or Scratch Dials by Dom Ethelbert Horne (Taunton, 1917):

47. (1) This dial is on the S.E. corner of the chancel, at a height of 5 feet 5 inches from the ground. The noonline is 4½ inches in length, the stylehole is 1 inch deep by 5⁄8 of an inch in diameter, and the aspect is S. by 10° W.

48. (2) On the S.W. corner of the S. aisle is a doubtful dial. It consists of a stylehole only, without other marks, at a height of 4 feet 6 inches from the ground. April 16th, 1915.

Dial No. 1 is of poor construction, and No. 2 is on a stone which is so badly weatherworn that it is a very doubtful one.

For the period 1733 to present, only about 5% of those buried have their names on memorials.

Previous Surveys

The basis of this documentation is a survey carried out in 2018. Surveys have been carried out in the past. There was one in 1909 which produced a graveyard register with transcriptions of memorials, some of which have subsequently disappeared. In 2007 a survey was conducted by the late Sir Mervyn Medlycott. This has “for most post-1837 memorials exact wording is not given on stones, but genealogical abstracts, giving all information in a concise form. Exact wording is however given for all pre-1837, and some other memorials. . . . Memorials post-dating 1960 have been omitted, except inside the church, where all memorials have been recorded”. The documentation refers to a survey previously carried out by Radley Wheeler, churchwarden.

Some of the internal memorial were described in the Edmund Rack Papers of c1782-6 (Somerset Record Office A/AQP 12, fos.92-94). Collinson’s History of Somerset (1791), vol.2, p.224, only mentions the Hillman memorial and the two Hellierd memorials, and The Church Rambler (1878 edition), vol.2, p.252, gives only the two Hellierd memorials.

The register 1714-1732 has for some burials the annotation that a charge was made of one shilling.

The burial register 1733-1775 has the date of death until 1743. The year in 1749 starts in January, in anticipation of the change of calendar in 1752. The Calendar (New Style) Act was introduced in 1750 and will have been debated prior to that. The Gregorian calendar had been introduced in 1582 superseding the Julian calendar of 45 BCE but while Scotland had adopted it in 1600 no such change was made then in England. Dual dates which give old style and new style years can be found on some memorials prior to 1752 so people were aware of the disparity. The register has many of the entries written in a clear but old-fashioned ‘clerical hand’ which changes in the 1770s when a more modern style is used. This clerical hand, much used in wills, is old-fashioned as entries in the 1720s have a much more contemporary look. Unlike most parishes, the registers record the burials of stillborn children (about 200 in the period 1733-).

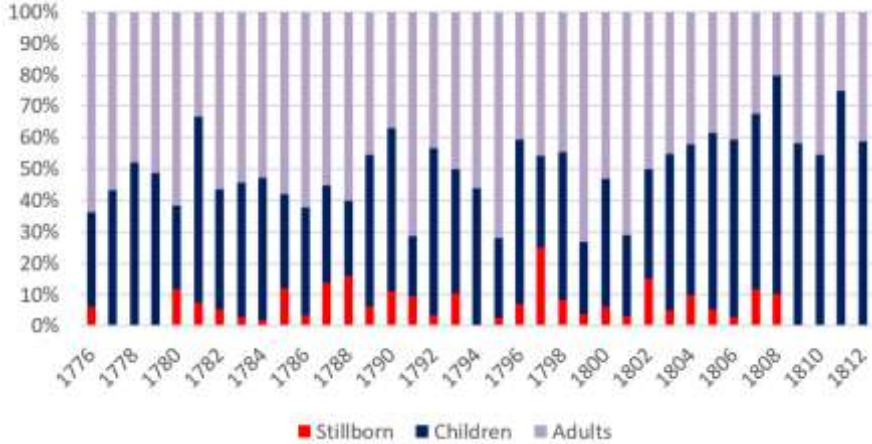

There is a peak in burials in 1760, 85 compared with the typical 30 to 40 per year. No explanation is given in the register. However, there is an annotation in the Hinton Charterhouse burial register for 1759 that ‘smallpox in the parish’.

The burial registers from 1871 have, for many entries, the plot number, so it is possible to identify some grave locations even if there is no memorial.

For several years the deceased gentleman resided at Garston-hill (we refer, of course, to the house now standing in Alexandra-road) with his sisters, after whose deaths he left Frome and rejoined his children in America. . . . Deceased was a native of Road. According to a United States paper deceased settled in the backwoods of Canada in early days, where he lived until 24 years ago, when upon the death of his wife, he came here (California) to reside with his daughter. Twenty years ago he returned to England, sojourning there nine years, when he came back to California. Besides his daughter he leaves four sons. . . .
